Canadians Fly Home

(Times News Services)
LEOPOLDVILLE.—The resignation of Prime Minister Cyrille Adoula's government has been accepted, President Joseph Kasavubu announced today.

The mandate of Adoula's cabinet officially expired today, the fourth anniversary of the Congo's independence.

But Kasavubu asked the government to stay in office until a new constitution, now before the country in a two-week referendum, has been approved, as it is expected to be.

There was widespread expectation that the new government would be headed by Moise Tshombe, the secessionist president of Katanga province whose defiance of Adoula's government was ended by the UN Congo force early in 1963.

Tshombe returned from self-imposed exile in Europe last week and embarked on a reconciliation mission to bring together the still turbulent African country's feuding politicians.

UN TROOPS LEAVE

The announcement of Adoula's resignation coincided with the departure of the last UN troops—Canadians and Nigerians—ending the United Nations military operation in the Congo.

An RCMP transport took off with 58 members of a Canadian

OTTAWA (CP)—Some Canadians in the Congo are missing, External Affairs Minister Martin informed the Commons today.

Army signal unit. A few minutes later a chartered DC-4 left with 45 men of the Nigerian Army's 1st Battalion.

Last man aboard was the UN's last commander, Maj. Gen. J. Aguiy-Troni of Nigeria, ending the UN military operation that began only two months after independence from Belgium June 30, 1960, brought anarchy and chaos to the Congo.

The Canadian Signallers were handed poinsettia blooms as they mounted the ramp for the first leg of their long flight to Trenton, Ont. The first stop was Pisa, Italy.

MONEY LACKING

The UN ended its military role in the former Belgian colony today for lack of money. There were no parades or ceremonies to mark the departure of the UN troops.

Those on hand included the civilian chief of the UN Congo operation, Bibiano Osori of Mexico, some 50 members of the diplomatic corps, and friends.

The gradual UN withdrawal started about three months ago. About 30 Pakistani soldiers running an ordnance depot here will stay as part of the UN's civilian operation.

With the military pullout complete, only 400 Nigerian police remain in the Congo—all in Leopoldville and mostly for training purposes—to help Congo.

U.S. Gives More Atomic Secrets To NATO Nations

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Johnson notified Congress today that he has approved a new agreement to extend the types of atomic information the United States may give to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and its member nations.

NO PAPER WEDNESDAY

The July 1 Dominion Day holiday will be observed by members of the Times staff and there will be no regular editions of the paper Wednesday. Next issues will be on Thursday with full reports of the holiday activities.

Pearson Puts Flag Debate Before Recess

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Pearson is insisting that the flag debate be completed and the new flag adopted for Canada before parliament gets its summer recess.

The prime minister has made no concession. He has agreed to the flag debate being interrupted after this week so that the Commons can get on with other important business. It was learned today.

These items include: Students loans, family allowances extensions, federal-provincial tax sharing arrangements, the 12-mile fishing limit, the Defence Act and interim supply.

After these essential items are approved the prime minister wants the House to return to the flag debate and finish it before the members leave for their home ridings in August. But the Conservatives are obviously going to balk at approving the flag before a summer recess.

Defence Secretary Robert S. McNamara and Glenn T. Seaborg, chairman of the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission, had recommended that the president approve the broadening agreement.

In a memorandum to Johnson, they stressed that the new agreement makes clear that there will be no transfer of atomic weapons or atomic weapons systems involving restricted data.

Experts said this provision would rule out any information or equipment that would help make any NATO member an independent nuclear power.

The new agreement supersedes an earlier one, under which NATO and its members have been receiving some atomic information for the last several years.

In notifying Congress of the new agreement, Johnson said the expanded area of information is needed to make effective use of nuclear delivery systems being provided by the U.S. under bi-lateral procedures and agreements that followed creation of NATO atomic stockpiles in 1957.

Also, Johnson said, the new agreement will permit NATO member countries to share in information that the U.S. has been exchanging only with NATO itself, under a 1955 agreement.

RULE MORE EFFECTIVE

"This will make these countries' role in alliance planning in the nuclear field more effective," Johnson said.

He said the new agreement "represents a logical and useful step in our continuing and varied efforts to ensure wider allied participation into NATO nuclear defenses."

Furthermore, Johnson said, "such wider participation is necessary on both military and political grounds. It is needed to enhance the effectiveness of NATO defenses. On political grounds, it is needed to reinforce NATO cohesion in meeting our allies' legitimate desire to make a constructive contribution to nuclear defense."

Under the Atomic Energy Act, the Joint House of Representatives-Senate atomic energy committee must have 3 days' notice before the agreement can go into effect.

McNamara and Glenn T. Seaborg, chairman of the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission, had recommended that the president approve the broadening agreement.

In a memorandum to Johnson, they stressed that the new agreement makes clear that there will be no transfer of atomic weapons or atomic weapons systems involving restricted data.

Experts said this provision would rule out any information or equipment that would help make any NATO member an independent nuclear power.

Strike Hits British TV

LONDON (AP)—Three thousand television employees decided to strike at midnight tonight against Britain's commercial TV network. The network said it hopes to carry news bulletins and perhaps old movies.

CHARGING that her brother betrayed his revolution and sold out Cuba to the Soviet Union, Premier Fidel Castro's sister Juanita, 41, has defected. In Mexico City she compared the Castro government with Nazi Germany. See story Page 12.

Typhoon Hits Philippines, 16 Killed

MANILA (UPI)—Typhoon Winnie smashed across the heavily-populated northern Philippines with 118-mile-an-hour winds today, causing at least 16 deaths and millions of dollars in property damage.

Reports coming in from affected areas were sketchy because communications lines were down in most places, and Manila itself was badly mauled and without electricity long after the storm had passed.

The weather station at the U.S. Clark air force base 60 miles north of Manila said the typhoon was heading for the Red China mainland.

Assistant presidential secretary Raul Gonzales said in a radio interview tonight that 3,000 families were affected in nearby Pasay City. He said a family of five perished there when their flimsy house collapsed.

Other casualties included two persons crushed to death in Manila when building walls fell on them at the height of the storm. Among other casualties were six persons who drowned in southern Palawan province when their boat capsized.

OIL BARGE EXPLOSION KILLS FOUR, 13 MISSING

MORGAN CITY, La. (AP)—An explosion and fire roared through a floating oil rig in pre-dawn darkness today, plunging the 11-million-dollar apparatus into the depths of the Gulf of Mexico. At least four persons were killed, another 13 persons or more were missing.

Twenty-five survivors were brought to hospital here. Some were burned but a hospital spokesman said all were in satisfactory condition.

The dead were not immediately identified. Helicopters ferried the survivors to this coastal fishing town about 70 miles west of New Orleans.

The rig sank in 180 feet of water, about 15 minutes after the explosion and wind-whipped flames blanketed the vessel.

Some of the first survivors to arrive at Lakewood hospital here were unconscious. Others were able to walk away in the rescue helicopters.

At least 42 men were aboard the twin-tailed rig, which was operating 70 miles southwest of Morgan City.

The 280-foot long rig—actually a drilling ship—is owned by Reading and Bates of Morgan City. It had moved to the explosion site only Monday.

Half the men on the "C. P. Baker" were asleep when the explosion occurred about 3:30 a.m.

The first survivors to reach here said the on-duty crew hit a shallow high pressure pocket of gas while drilling in the Gulf of Mexico at 640 feet. The gas began seeping up into the rig.

FLOOR BUCKLED

"The floor began to buckle and we knew it was time to get off," said one survivor.

Some had got a vortchout alongside when sparks on the rig touched off the explosion.

Those on board were trapped momentarily by flames which leaped skyward and covered the rig and surrounding waters. Wind whipped the flames away from one side of the rig and some of the men were able to jump into the water.

"It stood up on its end and down she went," said another survivor, describing how the drilling rig sank in more than 100 feet of water.

A spokesman for Reading and Bates here said the C. P. Baker, built last year, cost his company "about $6,000,000." He said the firm has four other rigs operating in the gulf.

SLEEPING CHILDREN DIE

Pilotless Jet Roars Into Home, 2 Killed

SULLIVAN

HAVERTHILL, Mass. (UPI)—A pilotless jet fighter plane crashed with the explosive fury of a bomb early today into three homes and a dozen parked cars in a residential area of this industrial city. Two sleeping children were killed.

The pilot, with an agonizing prayer that the area below was uninhabited, ejected himself from the F86 single-seater craft and parachuted to safety. He landed in a tree top.

The plane dropped silently and swiftly in the blackness shortly after midnight and crashed with a thunderous roar on Lackney Street. The street was transferred into a sea of flames.

The plane ricocheted off one house, veered crazily down the street bouncing off parked cars and another house, and plunged nose first into the bedroom of a third house where the children were asleep with their pet dog.

"The kids never had a chance," a policeman said.

Dead are Pamela Gifford, 11, and her brother Todd, 8, children of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Gifford. The dog also was killed.

The parents were hysterical. They were taken to a hospital for treatment.

The pilot, Capt. Delbert F. Sullivan of Boston's Back Bay section, said the engine went dead on him after a small explosion.

Before ejecting himself, he said he turned the plane to "a black area," hoping no houses were below.

Sullivan, father of five children, apparently thought he would not survive. He said, "I prayed that my five children would get a good father. I prayed the area was uninhabited."

After landing in the tree, Sullivan climbed down and made his way to the swift-flowing Merrimack River. He inflated his portable raft and floated out on the river until he was rescued.

IN COMPLETE DARK

Joseph Blanton, who was watching a late-show on television, said he heard "an enormous noise, like an atomic bomb, and I saw a mass of flames."

"I saw Earl Gifford (father of the dead children) wandering around in a complete daze. I shouted, 'Watch out for the live wires and flames.' He just groaned."

Matthew Cummings, who lives next door to the Giffords, said his house shook as it struck by lightning.

Residents grabbed garden hoses and sprayed them on the burning houses and cars. It took firemen more than one hour to put out the fires.

CZESTOCHOWA (AP)—

Robert F. Kennedy met for more than an hour in a 600-year-old monastery today with Stefan Cardinal Wysynski, key figure in the tense relations between Poland's Communist government and the Roman Catholic Church.

The U.S. attorney-general met the primate of Poland in the cloister of the monastery which attracts millions of Polish Catholic pilgrims.

Rezoning Sought For James Bay Shopping Centre

Rezoning for eight lots at Simcoe and Croft to provide space for building a local area shopping centre was requested today by Mace Homes and Investments Ltd.

The application at City Hall said a new Safeway store, a bank, restaurant and several small shops would be grouped around a shopping mall on property combined with the present site of a Safeway store.

Mace Investments also is building a 12-storey high-rise apartment block across the street.

Copper Project Ready to Roll

British Columbia's largest and most costly-copper property is expected to be in production within three years.

Granduc Mines Ltd., a subsidiary of Newmont Mining Corp. of New York announced today it has arranged financing for its $55,000,000 copper project about 35 miles northwest of Stewart at the head of the Portland Canal. The property is in rugged mountainous country at the head of the South Fork and Ladue Rivers.

The company plans to drive a 10 to 12-mile tunnel under the Ladue Glacier to connect with road systems to transport its copper concentrates from the mine to tidewater near Stewart. Granduc estimates that the property contains ore reserves of 32,500 tons grading about 1.33 per cent copper. A mill handling from 7,000 to 8,000 tons of ore daily will produce concentrates at a rate equivalent to 42,500 tons of copper metal annually.

The concentrates are to be shipped to the refinery of the American Smelting and Refining Co. at Tacoma, Wash. American Smelting has agreed to purchase all production for 10 years and has advanced Granduc $10,000,000.

People and Things

(Times News Services)

BAKERSFIELD, Calif.—For 101 hours, the only thing between a helicopter and the ground was fresh air and 48 eggs.

Then, Monday afternoon, the copter dropped down to an altitude of three feet, the four cartons of eggs were plucked from its skids, and it set down on hard ground for the first time since Thursday.

National Aeronautics Association referees—who taped the eggs to the skids to make sure the machine made no unauthorized landings—said the 101-hour, five-minute mark will be posted as a helicopter endurance record.

Four pilots took turns manning the copter, climbing in and out when it dropped Sunday, pilot Gene Goodman dropped an egg to the runway. It was one he had had in his pocket.

When the old mark, 72 hours, set four years ago by U.S. Navy flyers, was cracked Sunday, pilot Gene Goodman dropped an egg to the runway. It was one he had had in his pocket.

GROTON, Conn.—Renato Mendoza, 22, a sailor, nearly drowned when he tried swimming to his submarine as it moved down the Thames to sea.

Police said Mendoza, anxious to avoid an absent-without-leave mark on his record, jumped into the water to intercept the submarine Piper.

He became exhausted a quarter-mile out and shouted for help. A police launch was called out, but he made it to shore by himself.

Police said Mendoza had been on leave in Philadelphia and returned to New London as the Piper pulled out to sea without him.

Mendoza is helping out at the submarine base until the Piper returns in a week.

VANCOUVER—Girls here are buying topsless swimsuits.

Stores have received orders for 72 swimsuits at $35 each, and one leading women's shop has two samples showing in a display window.

The display suits were flown from Europe and have been previewed for local photographers.

Judiciously placed black patches on the straps of the topsless suits seemed to solve—temporarily at least—the problem of over-exposure.

PIKESVILLE, Md.—Actress Gloria de Haven was given a suspended $10 fine Monday for speeding to a Saturday night show for which she was late.

"I just couldn't keep 2,000 people waiting," she told a magistrate.

The 38-year-old actress is playing in The Sound of Music at a summer theatre just outside Baltimore.

A state policeman said he stopped her not far from the theatre. "She was passing everything in sight," he testified.

MONTREAL—A marriage annulment was granted in Superior Court Monday to a Roman Catholic woman on grounds that her Turkish Muslim husband had not been baptized.

Mr. Justice Charles A. Bertrand annulled the childless six-year marriage and ruled that marriages between Catholics and unbaptized persons are void because of a 16th century decree recognized by Quebec's Civil Code.

He ordered the Baptist minister who performed the ceremony to take notice of the annulment. The marriage was executed in a Baptist church because the husband wanted a "neutral" ceremony.

LONDON—Automation is about to hit Britain's legalized betting industry.

Robot bookies nicknamed "Honest Robert" will automatically collect bets and issue receipts at factories. The machines are intended to replace "runners"—men employed by bookmakers to collect bets from their fellow workers.

The home office said today the betting and gaming act permits factory runners and "presumably a runner could be either a man or a machine."

Gosley's Gang Does It Again At Gay Opener

By AUDREY ST. D. JOHNSON

Streamers of colorful flags, bright painted guardrails and British travel posters set an appropriate mood for the hundreds of Victorians who queued up at Oak Bay Junior High School Monday night to welcome the 1964 edition of the Smile Show.

Living up to the promise, Jerry Gosley and his "Gang" provided 2½ hours of vigorous entertainment in the tradition of a British seaside variety show.

The 12th annual edition is new in content, with one or two exceptions; it has some notable talent, some good dance numbers, a lot of old jokes offered with the zest of new ones, some up-to-date and topical material.

BELLY LAUGH

Best in the latter category, and in fact the best of Gosley, was the George Vancouver number, which also provided the evening's best belly laugh.

Appearing atop a light-trimmed dome in the familiar posture of the figure that crowns our Legislative Buildings, Jerry in a rhymed patter song complained of the seabirds that "made him a limey", high-risers that shut off his view of "sons of the beach", and "flying Phil".

Single greatest asset of the show is undoubtedly the professional skill and fine imagination of Allan Edwards who was responsible for some breath-catching set designs as well as the effective color co-ordinations and costumes.

NEEDS POLISHING

The opening ensemble, No where Else to Go, which echoes title and theme of Gosley's just-published biography, is seriously in need of the polishing that will probably come with repetition.

A threesome consisting of Gordon Jolley, Howard Webb and Ron Korhonen did an amusing number on the amalgamation of the armed forces, and the shortest pantomime on record—The Three Bears—had a very funny punch line.

WARM CHARM

One familiar figure and one new one added something of value. The warm charm of personality and haunting voice of Irene Henderson was present in several numbers; who could visualize the Smile Show without her?

And in Bettie Ellis, Gosley has found a boisterous comedienne whose buffoonery, though corny as Kansas, is fairly irresistible.

BRIGHT LIGHT

Attractive dancer Sylvia Mobey had a contest with Jim Peaker's drums in a well-devised number. Miss Mobey is a dancer of versatile talents and a bright light of the show.

Ron Korhonen again proved a brilliant man with an accordion, and a newcomer, Herbert Reinstein, revealed a good voice in a pleasing ballad style.

In my opinion, the show has some bad numbers this year that are unlikely to improve and would be better dropped. Chief among them are Romeo and Juliet and Scotland versus Ireland.

Responsible in large measure for successful aspects are choreographer Bebe Eversfield who provided a refreshing variation on I Could Have Danced All Night among other goodies, organist Ken Peaker and musical arranger Chet Lamberton.

Smile Show will run nightly through to Aug. 22.

Combined Choir At Royal Tonight

Combined choir of the Radcliffe Choral Society and the Harvard Glee Club will appear on stage at the Royal Theatre tonight at 8:30 for one performance.

Sponsored by the Victoria Celebrations Committee, the 90-voice group is under the direction of Prof. Elliott Forbes.

Their next engagement is at the Vancouver International Festival.

FISHING DOUBLED

Announce New Healing Substance...

Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids... and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissue.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved... actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

Among these case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief even occurred in cases of long standing, and most important of all, results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a principal cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

'U.S. Will Retain Historic Rights'

OTTAWA (CP)—External Affairs Minister Martin told the Commons. fisheries committee today that historic United States fishing rights will be honored when Canada extends its offshore territorial limit to 12 miles.

He was replying to questions by Tom Barnett (NDP—Comox-Alberni), who said many fishing rights were given to the U.S. by the British on Canada's behalf in the 19th century before Canadian governments were making their own decisions.

Mr. Barnett said preservation of these rights is absurd and Canada should ask the U.S. to forgo them. This would indicate to the U.S. that it was dealing with a truly sovereign nation.

Mr. Martin said it would be asking too much of the U.S. to ask it to drop these historic rights. Extension of the offshore limits to 12 miles was a big enough request in itself.

"We have already clearly shown we propose to honor historic U.S. fishing rights whether or not they are seriously used," Mr. Martin said. "We believe this is in the national interest."

COULD CAUSE CONCERN

"If we were to take unreasonable steps, there would be concern among other nations about our actions."

Angus MacLean (PC—Queens), former fisheries minister, suggested the bill providing for the new 12-mile limit should contain a reassurance for other countries which might fear the broad scope of the act, that Canada is not contemplating further arbitrary extensions.

"It is not necessary for us to say in the bill that international law and procedure will be followed," Mr. Martin said. "It is well understood by other countries that any Canadian government will act legally in such matters. We do not intend to make outlandish claims."

Turkish diplomats said Tuomioja is expected to propose that he make a fresh attempt to reach a settlement in separate negotiations with the Greek and Turkish governments.

"If these negotiations should fail, we do not see how we could escape the absolute necessity of exercising our treaty right to intervene in the island," a high Turkish source said.

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States has told the United Nations, Greece and Turkey it is ready to send an outstanding figure to the civil-war-torn island of Cyprus to help the UN in its peacemaking efforts.

golese authorities keep order. With the resignation of the A d o u l a government, Moise Tshombe's reconciliation mission went ahead in high gear.

'WILL BE FREED'

Tshombe, the former president of Katanga province, announced Monday night that Antoine Gizenga, head of Stanleyville's 1961 Communist-supported breakaway government, will be freed soon from the island prison where he has been held for 2½ years.

With Gizenga's return, all surviving political leaders at the outset of The Congo's independence will be back in the political arena.

UNITED NATIONS (AP)—United Nations Secretary-General U Thant said today a political reconciliation and retraining of the Congolese army are the two major and indispensable conditions for maintaining peace in The Congo.

Cornerstone Laid at Lake

SHAWNIGAN LAKE—The last phase of construction of the $25,000 Royal Canadian Legion Hall near here began at the weekend when members of the Malahat branch held a cornerstone-laying ceremony.

Past dominion president of the Legion, Alex Walker, of Mill Bay, officiated.

Excavation of the site, located on the Shawnigan-Mill Bay Road about a quarter mile from Shawnigan Lake, was carried out last fall. The foundations were poured this spring.

When completed, the hall will become the headquarters of the Malahat branch, whose 32 members have done all the work.

They expect to complete the 70-foot-by-30-foot building this year.

Future plans for the structure include the addition of a second storey when the need arises.

The project has been completely financed by legion members from proceeds of social events, assisted by the Ladies' Auxiliary.

WASHINGTON (AP)—A nuclear test in Nevada today sought further solutions to the problem of using atomic explosives for excavation projects such as harbors and canals.

The U.S. Atomic Energy Commission said the low-yield blast, with a force less than that of 30,000 tons of TNT, was set off underground at its Nevada test site.

Nazis Share Parade Before White House

WASHINGTON (AP)—Several hundred supporters of the Mississippi civil rights campaign picketed the White House Sunday night, holding lighted candles and chanting "we shall overcome."

Sharing the White House sidewalk with them was the largest concentration of pickets from the American Nazi party ever seen at the executive mansion.

The civil rights pickets represented the Congress of Racial Equality and were conducting a vigil for Mississippi freedom workers.

Fifteen of the Nazi party members, all but one in brown shirts and horned boots, paraded simultaneously but were allotted a separate segment of the sidewalk in front of the White House.

The Nazi party group carried the United States flag and the swastika of Nazi Germany as well as placards reading: "Who needs Niggers," and "Send troops to New York to protect white victims from black crime."

TOUGH 'HOSS' LEADS ANTI-SEGREGATION FIGHT

'No White Man Scared of Nigger'

By PAUL WILLS

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla. (AP) — Holsted (Hoss) Manucy, a tough, barrel-chested man wearing an old cowboy hat, commands a big, well-organized army here in a furious fight against racial integration.

His goal, Manucy says in his thick, slow southern drawl, is "to keep our kids white kids for the next 100 generations" in this tourist city now in the throes of daily racial violence.

Manucy's group claims 1,476 members and a better communications system than the regular law enforcement agencies. It has frequently given aid to the police and sheriff's office.

Right now it is working on its own, around the clock, in an effort to blunt the assault of St. Augustine's racial barriers by Dr. Martin Luther King's Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

"We're not responsible for the rock throwing in the square or the fighting on the beach," Manucy says. "That was done by kids who are not members. We can't control every kid."

SAVED ONE LIFE

Manucy was credited with saving a policeman's life by wresting a gun from a white man angered because officers used tear gas to stop a white counter-demonstration.

Manucy's organization is called the Ancient City Hunting Club. It has a clubhouse and a hunting preserve.

Recently, when federal Judge Bryan Simpson saw Manucy's name on a list of special deputies, he noted that Hoss was an ex-convict and wondered if his club wasn't a branch of the Ku Klux Klan.

"Sure, I've got a record," Manucy said. "Everybody around here knows that. It's a whisky record. I never stole anything."

"We're not tied to the Klan in any way, although I'm not knocking the Klan. It's a wonderful organization."

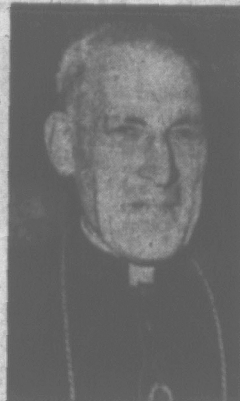

Last week, Manucy's organization kicked off a campaign to have white employers fire their Negro help. Some, he says, already have done so and others will follow suit.

"A nigger can't make a living without a white man," Manucy says. "He will have to go north, where the welfare cheques are bigger."

"That's the way to win this fight without bloodshed," Manucy and Sheriff L. O. Davis, who are close friends, are credited by many with helping to prevent violence by whites.

Manucy says he has received many threats. Bricks have been thrown through the windows of his cars. Last year, a shot was fired into a car driven by one of Manucy's sons, killing another man in the car.

But Manucy says he isn't afraid. "There's no white man scared of a nigger. That's a proven fact in St. John's County."

CELEBRATING his 25th anniversary as a bishop of the Roman Catholic Church Richard Cardinal Cushing, 69, disclosed Monday in Boston that eight years ago doctors gave him only eight months to live because of a cancer. "The Lord chooses the foolish to confound the wise," he remarked.

'Canadians Lack Contact With U.S. Racial Views'

GENEVA PARK, Ont. (CP) — Canada has no race problem because there are "no niggers" and Indians are segregated on government reserves, William Simmons of Jackson, Miss., an administrator of the Citizen's Council of America, said Monday.

Addressing 77 high school students at a week-long conference on race problems sponsored by the United Nations Association of Canada, Mr. Simmons said Canadians cannot be expected to understand a situation with which they have so little contact.

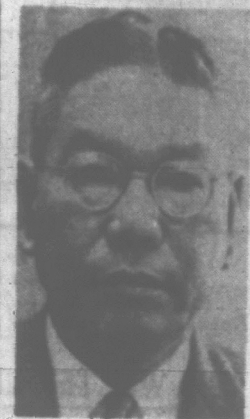

"I believe I am the first citizen's council representative to speak in Canada, which indicates that our views are not known to you," he told the audience at this conference site near Orillia.

"And I see that in Canada you have no race problems because you have no niggers and your Indians are segregated on government reservations," he added.

He said propaganda has disturbed and distorted the Negro's actual feelings and experience in the South. The southern Negroes themselves were embarrassed and resentful of northern agitators and missionaries who went to Mississippi. Mr. Simmons, who edits a newspaper of the Citizen's Council, said many people in the South would be astonished to be told they had race problems.

"We have no such upheavals as have racked England," he said. "Negroes get a better education in southern separate schools than they do in northern integrated ones, and we show a remarkable tact and courtesy to our Negro neighbors. Government laws could never achieve that."

Robert Gore of the Congress of Racial Equality was originally scheduled to rebut Mr. Simmons' argument but cancelled his engagement because of the disappearance of three civil rights workers in Mississippi.

THIRD CONSECUTIVE term as president of the ruling Liberal-Democratic party will be sought by Japanese Premier Hayato Ikeda. "I'm completely confident I'll win on the first ballot," he said. Convention is set for July 10.

FOR LEADERSHIP

Two Islanders Win Scout Merit Medals

Two southern Vancouver Island men have been awarded Medals of Merit for their services to the Boy Scout movement. It was announced today.

Athole G. (Lofty) Coning, of Victoria and Burnaby, and John T. Martin, of Milne's Landing, were given the awards for leadership services.

Mr. Coning, manager of the Victoria Mayfair shopping centre here, lives in Burnaby, and is a member of the Burnaby regional council.

He began working in the Scout movement after he retired from the navy in 1947.

32 YEARS

Mr. Martin has been engaged in or associated with the movement for 32 years, and has been district commissioner since 1960.

He received his long service medal in 1961.

Mr. Martin has been scout master of three troops, and was assistant district commissioner for one year before taking his present post.

BUS SERVICE JULY 1ST

Holiday service will be in effect on all city bus routes on Dominion Day, Wednesday, July 1.

Edgelow Wins Metro Survey

Ald. Geoffrey Edgelow fought and won a single-handed battle at a Victoria council meeting Monday for an interim report on possible impact of the semi-metro concept on Victoria taxpayers.

Fraudulent Financier Vanishes

LONDON (Reuters) — Kenneth de Courcy, editor, publisher, and financier sentenced at London's central criminal court last December to seven years' imprisonment for fraud, perjury and forgery, disappeared Monday night from his lawyer's office here.

De Courcy, 54, was visiting the office in connection with his appeal against the conviction. Earlier in the day he appeared before the Court of Criminal Appeal.

The 11 charges on which he was sentenced arose mainly from a $1,000,000 plan for property development in Southern Rhodesia. It involved the building of a township near Salisbury and large subscriptions had been received from the investigating public.

De Courcy left the lawyer's office while prison officers were a short distance away, a security officer said. The office is 200 yards from the law courts.

High-Rise Plan Shot Down By Esquimalt

Plans to build a high-rise apartment block with a seventh floor restaurant in Esquimalt never got off the floor at Esquimalt council on Monday.

The council decided the plans would not be acceptable as they stand at present.

The proposal was for a six-storey apartment block with a rooftop restaurant, at Esquimalt Road and Woollaston.

But municipal engineer John Graeme said present plans for the building were not acceptable.

He said a rooftop restaurant would attract a lot of people who might prove a nuisance to residents of the building. He suggested housing the restaurant on the ground floor.

The present site, he said, would not leave enough clearance either side between existing buildings.

He suggested that the firm which proposes putting up the block, M. and H. Holdings Ltd. of Victoria, should consider obtaining more land.

At present there would be only 10 feet clearance on one side and 12 feet on the other. Council would require in the region of 50 feet.

The council agreed to consider the plans if these changes were made.

Declaring himself leery of the "piecemeal amalgamation" proposals of Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell, he said council should ask city manager Dennis Young to analyze and report the ramifications for Victoria "as far as they can be seen at this stage."

Both Mayor R. B. Wilson and Ald. Baird said it was pointless to have an analysis made now because "detailed negotiations by the municipalities have not begun."

Ald. Edgelow, exasperated because no one would second his motion calling for a report, finally warned his colleagues: "If the council is not interested in getting this information, then I will notify council formally that I will myself ask for such a report from the city manager."

Stung by the statement, Ald. A. I. Curtis entered the debate to say it was unfair.

"I take second place to no one in being interested in the city's affairs but I will second the motion only if the city manager says he feels he can make a useful report."

USEFUL SUMMARY

Mr. Young said he could not make any accurate forecasts on the basis of what little is known of Mr. Campbell's plans but he felt he could make a "useful" summary of the basic proposal and outline "some of its possible effects on the city as well as raise some questions that should be answered."

With that, Mayor Wilson said a report should be requested and council passed Ald. Edgelow's motion but he immediately ran into another stumbling block.

Proposing a second motion that a similar report be sought from Theo Adams, executive secretary of the Union of B.C. Municipalities, Ald. Edgelow said the city should seek all the information it could possibly obtain on the semi-metro proposal.

Some aldermen objected that the UBCM was not involved but council finally passed the motion after Ald. M. H. Mooney made Ald. Edgelow substitute the UBCM executive for Mr. Adams.

REPORT BACK

Mayor Wilson, who will attend a closed meeting of Greater Victoria civic leaders and government officials within a month, promised aldermen he would report back to them frequently and fully on the semi-metro negotiations.

At council's suggestion, he undertook to try to obtain an invitation to the closed sessions for Mr. Young as a technical advisor.

Two Paths Ahead

CANADA TOMORROW CELEbrates an anniversary just three years short of the centenary of its founding. Probably at no time since the British North America Act came into force, creating the nucleus of our transcontinental country, have we been faced with more divisive problems, more publicized dangers to our continued existence as a nation.

Those problems and dangers are very real, and more insistent because they are internal. When we have been threatened with outside hazards—of war, of economic or political engulfment—the common danger has usually had a unifying effect. But the present controversy is suicidal in essence. Carried to its extreme it would destroy us as a nation: the parts so carefully joined at Confederation and added to in succeeding years would not long survive their sundering.

As a sea-to-sea entity we have had difficulty enough in overcoming the north-south pull of geography and economics. As separate English and French islands it is not likely that we would long surmount the North American tide.

There is a saving element in the situation which holds the promise of successful survival. It is that our internal stresses are, as has been mentioned, well publicized. There is here no hidden discontent, no crypto-separatist movement, no secret festering resentment which is denied expression until it erupts in a violent and irreversible explosion. For the racial problem of Canada today is receiving the widest publicity, the widest discussion, the widest invitation to suggestions for answers and remedies which it possibly can.

The future of debate is disturbing—and shocking to all who love our country, but the very outspokenness is itself a safety valve and a source of eventual understanding. The fact is that Canada today is coming to know itself as it never has before. It is regrettable that this could only be achieved under the stress of dissension and racialism, at times bitter; far better if it could have come about in the peaceful climate of a country-wide desire for knowledgeable Canadianism. But this is the way we are doing it—the hard way.

Under the impetus of its thriving racial consciousness French Canada may ask for more than, as a true part of Canada, it should receive. Non-French reaction to extreme demands may swing too far in a negative direction. But English Canada should remember that possibly the great majority of Quebecois give no support to the current separatist movement—as some have asked: "How can Canada separate from Canada?" French Canada, on the other hand, should remember that the great majority of the people outside Quebec have not the slightest wish to deprive it of rights or, until recently, the slightest thought that there may have been deprivation.

The publicity, the interchange, the nation-wide debate will help to solve the problem. The extremists will find their places on the fringe; the vast, solid core of the people, all races included, will gradually coalesce in true nationhood.

Using only this minimum of common sense and understanding we can avoid the suicide of national dismemberment, and our centenary three years from tomorrow will dawn not on a wake but on a vigorous welcome to another century of growth.

A Tribute to the Chief

THE CEREMONY IN THE Hudson's Bay Company

"Thunderbird House" yesterday which paid a well deserved tribute to the late Chief Mungo Martin, also provided a means by which the people of this province, and particularly of its capital city, may recognize the greatness of that fine and talented man.

Presentation of the Canada Council Medal to Mrs. Helen Hunt, representing the family of the Chief, was a fine posthumous gesture, as was her handing it to the Provincial Museum for permanent display. But a more personal recognition by the people is invited through contributions to the fund which will establish an impressive copper plaque—executed by the noted Indian artist William Reid—at some suitable location in the city.

It is the thought of the sponsors that the plaque will form a public tribute to the famous Chief through donations from a wide cross-section of the people. The children especially are invited to have a share in this lasting memorial, and it is hoped that many adults will contribute so as to make the project a truly popular one.

Mungo Martin did far more than produce totems and paintings and help to preserve the songs and legends of his people. He made clear the genuine artistry and value of the lore of his race and so inspired many younger men to take up chisel and brush to portray their great heritage.

That was the gift of the Chief. The plaque will be a small recognition of our debt to him.

After De Gaulle, What?

THE GUESSING GAME IN French politics continues to centre on what happens if General de Gaulle does not seek re-election.

Nobody knows for sure, but the results of straw votes and public opinion polls—indicating in the first instance that the General leads all other aspirants—suggest that no follower of de Gaulle is a certain winner.

A recent survey by the French Public Opinion Institute revealed some interesting statistics. Prime Minister Georges Pompidou, considered de Gaulle's "current dauphin," trailed Gaston Defferre, chief of the oppositionists, by eight per cent. But Defferre polled only 29 per cent in the survey and the number undecided ran over a quarter of the total straw vote.

On the informal tests conducted to date, only half of those who would vote for de Gaulle would vote for any other Gaullist. The French president clearly has no heir apparent who would automatically assume the role of head of state.

Reminder to German Military

THE CLUMP OF NAZI JACK-boots in the last war and the click of Prussian heels in the war before it produced echoes which are now receding with time.

The echoes are, nevertheless, still heard by sensitive ears and it is gratifying to note that among those listening closely is Inspector General Hellmuth Heye, a retired vice-admiral named by the Bundestag to oversee the armed forces in West Germany and to make sure that they develop democratically.

He has questioned recent developments and a trend he detects in the German armed forces toward becoming once more "a state within a state."

"If we do not turn the rudder sharply now," wrote the inspector general in a widely-read German publication, "the Bundeswehr will develop troops that we do not wish to have." He doubts, moreover, that the officers have true respect for the democratic element in the armed forces, or want to be kept responsive to outside control.

The views expressed have been challenged by spokesmen for the armed forces of West Germany and have led to requests for an immediate investigation.

What might be the outcome of an investigation, if one is held, can only be a matter of conjecture to outsiders. It is nonetheless gratifying to hear an expression of concern voiced by a responsible German. This alertness may justifiably allay any fears among forgiving former enemies who have been encouraged by West Germany's post-war progress but have no desire to see the re-emergence of the German army as an unresponsive "state within a state."

FROM WASHINGTON

A Viet Nam Policy That Could Succeed

THE big shake-up of the American high command in Saigon is, of course, a recognition that the situation has deteriorated and that a change of policy, measures and of men is necessary.

The newspaper reader is not in a position to answer this question himself, for the administration is not talking very much. It is not able to be utterly candid. For in this tense and dangerous situation all its words are acts, and the administration is having to consider their effect in Saigon, in Hanoi, in Peking, not to speak of Washington and San Francisco.

For what it may be worth, I would say that James Reston of the New York Times was quite right when he said that the shake-up does not indicate that a decision has been taken to carry the war to North Viet Nam and to increase greatly United States participation in the fighting. My impression, which may, I admit, turn out to be wrong, is that a different decision has been taken.

Misplaced Diem Bet

The original American policy in South Viet Nam, as laid down by Secretary Dulles under President Eisenhower and expanded by Gen. Maxwell Taylor under President Kennedy, rested fundamentally on the belief that the Saigon government under President Diem would be able, with American military and financial assistance, to subdue and pacify the Viet Cong rebellion. When this victory was won, the United States would withdraw and Southeast Asia would have been saved for the free world.

This well-meant, but remarkably naive policy broke down when the failure of Diem caused the United States to connive at the overthrow of President Diem and his family. Since then, there have been two successive governments, neither of which has had roots in the people of Viet Nam, and the resistance to the rebellion has been kept going only by an increasing participation of Americans in the actual fighting. Recently it has become plain to everyone that the war was going to be lost, not won, under the original conception of Eisenhower and Dulles, Kennedy and Taylor.

Then there appeared two schools of thought about American policy and strategy.

Attack to North

One school has argued that the way to win the war is to carry it by bombing and blockade to North Viet Nam and if necessary into Red China. This theory rests on the belief that the Viet Cong rebellion in South Viet Nam would subside if it were not supplied with fresh cadres of officers from the north and if it were not directed daily by the extensive military and political radio network. This school believes in handing some kind of ultimatum to Hanoi and, if Hanoi did not then cease and desist, in attacking North Viet Nam with sea and air power.

While this school gained adherents within the administration, it does not, yet at least, speak for the administration. The real policy, I venture to think, is about like this: there is not and cannot be such a thing as a military victory in the civil war, and an attack on North Viet Nam will not cause the Viet Cong rebels, who are predominantly South Vietnamese, to surrender to General Khanh. To attack North Viet Nam would be, therefore, a quite incalculable risk—incalculable in what it would provoke.

The only tolerable outcome, therefore, is a settlement by negotiation in which China and the United States are the principals, with the Soviet Union, France, Great Britain and India participating as mediators and eventual guarantors. The critical word is "eventual." The real difficulty comes from the fact that we are not able now to bring about this kind of negotiation which would satisfy our own honor and serve the vital interests of all concerned.

Unless I have been grossly and continually misled, our objective is to create a balance of forces which favors and supports a negotiated settlement in Southeast Asia. I do not think that our policy is as simple-minded as Secretary Dean Rusk occasionally chooses to make it seem—that he thinks that we can intimidate North Viet Nam into letting Laos and South Viet Nam "alone." For even if Hanoi let them alone for 18 months, what would prevent Hanoi from not letting them alone in the future? Quite plainly, there must be a settlement of a complex of issues, not a mere promise to cease and desist.

To promote the eventual negotiation, it is essential, first of all, to prevent a collapse of the resistance in Saigon and make it plain, as we have been doing recently, that it is not our intention to withdraw and wash our hands. It is no less essential to make military dispositions in the South Pacific and the Indian Ocean which make it clear that, when our troops withdraw from the mainland, the American presence will remain.

Deployment for Peace

I believe—I hope I am still entitled to believe—that this is what is now going on—that General Taylor is going to Saigon to consolidate the resistance, with which he is so much identified, and that the movement of naval ships and transports and airplanes toward Southeast Asia is a deployment which, though it could be used for war, is intended to promote a treaty of peace.

The course of policy, which I have tried to sketch, is not guaranteed to succeed. But it is a rational policy that could succeed. And if the worst happens, if Peking is bent on a conquest and not a settlement, our forces will be in position and on the alert.

A Searching Look at Immigration Practice

THE complaints in Parliament about recent deportation proceedings have had at least two salutary results. They have caused the government to agree to an investigation, although not under the Inquiries Act, and they have led Mr. Tremblay, the minister of citizenship and immigration, to promise a study of proposals for providing legal service without charge to individuals concerned.

A commissioner appointed under the Inquiries Act possesses very wide powers to subpoena witnesses, to examine them under oath, to have access to documents and papers and to hold public hearings. In appointing Mr. Sedgwick, the government has not accepted the demand for an inquiry of this type. This will, nevertheless, be more than the usual departmental inquiry.

In the first place, Mr. Sedgwick has been given wide terms of reference. He is not only to investigate the particular grievances raised in Parliament but is also to assess present procedures in the department and to make recommendations to the two ministers concerned. He is instructed to accept representations from any interested persons. Furthermore, his report to the ministers will be tabled in Parliament and there is a half-promise from the government that it will be referred to a committee.

Mr. Tremblay seized the opportunity to enter a formal defence of the recent conduct of the department. He began by making the mathematical points that the number of deportation cases, in relation to the total of immigrants and non-immigrating travellers is very small.

This is obviously a weak argument and Mr. Tremblay did not press it very far. It was only by accident that Parliament tumbled onto the 20 cases which have aroused concern. As the minister indicated, deportations average 30 a week or some 1,560 a year. If the procedures are such that a score of cases can arise in four months, Parliament may well worry about how many that attracted no attention arose last year.

It is well to remember, however, that immigration is a privilege and not a right and that, furthermore, the department is responsible to Parliament for enforcing the controls set out in the law. This does mean that officials are sometimes called upon to deal with very difficult cases. Mr. Tremblay drew protests from NDP members at one point because he made a reference to subversive organizations. But his text seems clear enough and these particular rebukes seem quite unwarranted.

The minister had voiced suspicion that, at least in some areas, there are "organized rackets" in this field. This recalls the investigation of some years ago, and again more recently, into illegal Chinese entries. He went on to say: "That method of (illegal) entry also allows for the infiltration of members of subversive and criminal organizations."

This is neither a "sneer," as Mr. Peters suggested, nor an allegation, as Mr. Orlikow charged. Mr. Tremblay did not say that subversive organizations were at work. What he pointed out was that a situation which can be exploited for one purpose, by racketeers interested in money could also be exploited by others whose interest was political.

Mr. Tremblay reviewed at length the procedures of his department from the detention of a suspect, to his actual de-

Clip It Yourself

That you cannot fool all the people all of the time is a truism, and it would be well that the barbering community should take this to heart and retreat from the position into which it has worked itself.

At the old rate of $1.50 for a man's haircut no one could persuade me that barbers were not making a very comfortable living. The raising of their charge by 25 cents can only be ascribed to a cynical disregard of the community at large and the selfish aim of getting all they can from their victims. But there is such a thing as killing the goose that lays the golden eggs.

The barbers have exploited the average man's inability to cut his own hair to such a point that the victim is likely to turn. If such a movement gains momentum, woe to the barbers who may find they have arrived at the point of diminishing returns. This could finally result in a surplus of barbers and unemployment in the craft of barbering.

For the cost of less than 10 haircuts an electric outfit can be purchased, and the obvious answer to this increased charge is for each household to purchase one and for one member of the family to do the hair-cutting for the rest.

HORATIUS

Salvation 'Old Hat'

The Rev. Dr. F. E. H. James, lamenting the lack of religion in schools, leaves us a farewell indictment. "In my 12 years here in the ministry, I have never received an official invitation to a school function. The Christian minister is not welcome. There should be recognition in education, of the Christian faith."

The learned doctor is telling us that the imprint of Christianity and the image of the faith of the old days has faded from the school forum.

In these days of materialistic madness, people prefer flags to the Apostles Creed; they prefer two cars to the Ten Commandments; they prefer electronics to immortality; they prefer heavy mortgages to the heaviest book (the world's best seller is hardly read anymore) and the catechism, to a school child today, sounds like domestic animal. The world is very sick. To many, the salvation of the soul is "old hat."

This lapse is the legacy of two world wars where life was as cheap as chips; when the flower of manhood was left behind and the best brains never came back. Nevertheless, let us assure Dr. James of our belief in the turning of the tide towards Christianity and peace in our time.

CLARENCE S. GOODE

Bus Deal and Votes

As one who has to depend on buses for transportation may I say that it would only seem right and proper that since our present government helped themselves to the former B.C.E. they therefore then have a responsibility to us who have need of such transportation.

We so often hear of considerations and concessions which should be granted to O.A.P.s. Yet with all due respect to senior citizens it should always be remembered there are many hundreds of us far from being senior also try to live on very limited incomes.

We simply cannot afford to own and operate a car. Often, too, many times we have to forego entertainment because we have to consider the cost. Should bus fares increase it means our trips to town will be taken only when absolutely necessary, thus causing a further decrease in bus patronage.

Thank goodness we have an understanding mayor such as Mayor R. B. Wilson.

The present government will not be returned at the next election by my vote, and I would suggest that all who use bus transportation also remember the bus "deal" whenever another election is called.

Habeas Corpus

"As to immigration officials not bringing persons detained under the Immigration Act before the courts for review at regular intervals," said the minister, "the legality of the detention is always subject to verification by the courts on habeas corpus." So it is but this is meaningful only if the accused has counsel to bring such proceedings.

It will be useful if Mr. Sedgwick also investigates Mr. Brevin's complaint that the right to counsel is sometimes of little protection to persons held because of the refusal of officers to disclose the true reason for the charge.

Mr. Tremblay's case was in one respect puzzling because he used arguments which seem completely contradictory. A minister has a right under the act to re-open inquiry proceedings if new evidence turns up or for a "strong humanitarian factor not previously exposed." Mr. Tremblay said that he had no apologies for interposing such delays.

"As long as I am minister, I shall ensure that I and the officials of the department do not act in a bureaucratic and arbitrary manner to remove anyone with undue haste, if there are valid reasons for reviewing the original decisions," he said.

While this is a creditable attitude it seems to be directly of variance with the opinion expressed only a few minutes later by the same minister. "In my own view," he said, "it is both desirable and urgent that consideration be given to making the decisions of the immigration appeal board final and not subject to ministerial discretion as at present."

Gerald Waring

...REPORTING

OTTAWA — Maybe somebody figured it would be a good omen to have federal and provincial resources ministers meet last week in Charlottetown, where the centennial of the amicable 1864 conference that led to Confederation is being celebrated.

One is left with the impression, however, that there's more irony than augury in the focus of last week's conference.

This conference underlined the fact that resources management is one of the greatest problems facing Canadians in the immediate future—and that sharp conflicts are arising between federal and provincial interests in resources.

Generally the provinces own the resources. But Ottawa is concerned that these resources be developed in the best interests of the whole nation, and not just for the maximum short-term advantage of the province concerned. The way is thus being prepared for some mighty battles much like those that marked and marred the birth of the Columbia power project.

The biggest "for instance" concerns offshore mineral rights: who owns the gas, oil and other minerals that may be found under the waters off both coasts and under the waters of Hudson's Bay?

The Ottawa government claims national possession and control of the continental shelf east, north and west, and the resources that may be in these submarine land masses.

The department of northern affairs and national resources has granted oil and gas exploration permits covering 46 million acres of the continental shelf off the east coast, 11 million acres off the west coast, and a small amount under Hudson Bay.

The companies so licensed—Shell, Mobile and Pan-American—have been faced with claims by provincial governments that the oil and gas belongs to the provinces, not to Ottawa.

One company that paid a nominal $20 to Ottawa for the right to see if it can find oil under coastal waters was then charged $1,200,000 by a provincial government for the same right to explore the same underwater area!

Every province except Alberta and Saskatchewan—which are landlocked—and New Brunswick and Newfoundland, which probably just haven't got around to it, has claimed it owns the oil that may be under the continental shelf off its coast. Every one wants that 12½ cents a barrel royalty on production.

The shelf runs several hundred miles out to sea, so Nova Scotia is claiming oil that may be halfway to Bermuda.

In Hudson Bay, where the boundaries of Quebec, Ontario and Manitoba extend only to the shoreline by acts of Parliament passed before the First World War, these provinces are confidently cutting up the bay as though it were a big apple pie.

And in the Gulf of St. Lawrence the Quebec government has granted oil exploration permits to Quebec Hydro, its own company—thus serving notice on Ottawa that what's under waters that wash against Quebec belongs to Quebec.

The situation has the makings of a magnificent federal-provincial battle to decide for whom the offshore resources shall be developed: all the people of Canada, or just those of coastal provinces.

The first moves are now being made: Ottawa and British Columbia are considering putting a test case to the Supreme Court of Canada for a decision, hopefully, by 1968.

NATURE ON THE ISLAND

By CLIFF CARL

Lose a Leg—Grow Another

Losing a leg or other appendage can be a serious matter to some animals but to others it is merely routine as the lost member can easily be replaced. This extraordinary power of regeneration is found in a number of groups but is particularly striking in certain invertebrates, including the starfishes, crustaceans, worms, sea anemones and others. Regenerative ability is also found in fish, amphibians and reptiles but to a much more limited degree.

Dealing first with the replacement of legs, the most striking examples are found among the various species of crabs and their relatives. In any group of these animals it is quite common to find a few individuals with one or more appendages missing or in various stages of being regenerated.

Study has shown that crab legs and claws break off rather easily, leaving a stub which quickly heals over. But it is not a permanent disfigurement. At the next moult when the animal casts off its outer covering or shell, a normal process to allow for growth, a new limb-bud appears at the base of the amputation, and with each successive moult the limb increases in size.

In a period of time varying from a few months to a year or so, the interval depending upon the frequency of moulting and other factors, the lost appendage will be completely replaced.

Being able to lose a limb in this manner is of considerable survival value to the animal. If a leg gets caught in a rock crack, for example, the crab needn't remain helplessly trapped. It simply drops the detained member and proceeds on its usual business, apparently with practically no discomfort or inconvenience. Such self-amputation is also useful in allowing a crustacean to escape from a predator merely by sacrificing the appendage in the grasp of the meat-eater.

A similar device is used by some amphibians and reptiles but with these animals it is the tail, not a leg, which is lost. The fragile-looking red salamander, which may be found under rotting logs in the coastal forest, readily drops its tail when it is seized. In due course another one grows, but it never attains the length of the original.

Better known perhaps is our common lizard, the alligator lizard of Vancouver Island and adjacent mainland.

In the case of this reptile the tail may be dropped without even being touched. A sudden fright will do the trick if the animal is of a particularly nervous nature. Moreover, the self-amputated member immediately goes into a series of active twists and turns which often engages the attention of a would-be predator while the lizard escapes.

Again the lost tail is replaced but in a shortened form. Study has shown that successive tails can be cast off when necessary but each break is successively nearer the base. Presumably then, the number of dismemberments is limited—eventually the lizard runs out of original tail sections where breaks can occur.

In the starfish not only can each individual replace any arms which become lost but each detached arm can grow another complete body!

This was discovered years ago when Atlantic coast oyster-growers attempted to eliminate predatory starfishes by chopping them into pieces and throwing the fragments back into the sea. They were astonished to find this practice increased the number of starfish as each part reproduced the whole. Only by removing the starfish permanently from the water was the problem of control finally solved.

Even more amazing powers of regeneration are found in flatworms—a group of rather lowly creatures that creep about on the bottom in both fresh and salt water. Cutting these animals into pieces merely produces more individuals as each portion grows the missing parts, providing the piece contains parts of all the necessary organs as starting points.

One experimenter tested this regenerative ability to the extreme. He ground up a living flatworm, passed the jelly-like pulp through a handkerchief and observed the separated cells reunite to form tissues, then organs, then the complete individual again.

In warm-blooded animals (birds and mammals) regeneration extends only to mending breaks in tissues and bones; severed appendages are never replaced—part of the price paid for specialization and advancement in other features.

Send questions in natural history to Dr. Cliff Carl, care of the Times.

HOME GARDEN

Your Chives Can Be Tasty And Attractive

By HILDA BEASTALL

Chives are hurrying into flower despite claims that the season is slow, late and, in general, no good for gardeners.

Those who use quantities of chive greens for the delicate, appetizing aroma and flavor of onion which they impart, will know that the green stems become coarse and hard as soon as flowering starts.

If a long row of chives is grown, a useful idea is to allow alternate plants to bloom, for they are attractive enough—small round heads of tiny mauve flowers.

But alternate plants should be kept free of flowers by cutting off the stems as soon as buds are seen. In fact a few plants should be cut to the ground about mid-June in an effort to prevent blooming and to encourage the continuance of edible green stems.

CUT LATER

Those which are allowed to bear bloom can be cut back later, and in this way chives can be kept producing over a long period.

Parsely is another herb which requires continuous gathering to promote continuous production. It tends towards flowering in its second year, so in spite of it frequently living through the winter in this coastal climate we need to sow it every year.

Chives are usually grown from a small group of little bulbs purchased in spring, or donated by a neighbor. Each bulb will develop into a "clump."

Both parsely and chives need a deep, rich soil well supplied with humus and moisture. They are both herbs which few of us would willingly be without, and neither are commonly seen in the markets.

To enjoy their goodness, we must grow them.

Freedom for 174

LUSAKA (AP)—Another 174 political prisoners were released in Northern Rhodesia Monday under Premier Dr. Kenneth Kaunda's amnesty plan, bringing the total released since March to 630. For the first time, members of the opposition African National Congress, believed to number about 40, were among those released.

Minister Sworn

OTTAWA (CP)—E. J. Benson, Liberal MP for Kingston, Ont., was sworn in Monday as minister of national revenue.

HUMPHREY

JOHNSON'S CHOICE?

Humphrey Riding High Despite His Bluntness

WASHINGTON (AP)—Four years ago John F. Kennedy trounced Hubert Humphrey in the West Virginia presidential primary, and Humphrey looked like a has-been.

Now he's back riding the crest, with friends in high places, and with a strong chance of being President Johnson's choice for vice-president.

As Senate whip, Humphrey has the major responsibility for wheeling, arguing, jolly-ing, and persuading along to vote on government legislation.

Friend and foe alike—has an abundant, highly opinionated supply of each—could agree that if anyone can keep tempers soothed during the wearying days in Congress it's the Democratic senator from Minnesota, a bouncy, high-spirited man who will not be put down.

Humphrey is mentioned respectfully as one of the most powerful men in Congress, as friend and adviser to the president.

MET BLOCKS

It hasn't been this way long. Few senators have had so much trouble getting themselves taken seriously. Few have met such unyielding opposition.

In an age when the canny politician avoids taking sides—until the opinion polls roll in—Humphrey is the pussy-foot's mortal enemy.

He is one of the first to commit himself on everything: Civil rights—his speech demanding a strong civil rights platform split the Democratic national convention in 1948, medical care for the aged, nuclear disarmament, the peace corps.

To many conservatives he has personified what they mean when they refer to a wild-eyed left-winger.

Tall Texan Top Gun In November Shootout

By HAROLD MORRISON

WASHINGTON (CP)—A tall Texan, equally at home in a saddle or behind the wheel of a fast-moving convertible, is the man to beat in November's presidential election.

Can the Republicans do it? Some have already thrown in the towel, agreeing with the Democrats that Lyndon Baines

Johnson may be unconquerable.

The 55-year-old Johnson sometimes talks of his administration's aims in terms that sound like cornpone platitudes to the sophisticated voter.

His idea of building the foundations of a "great society" in which poverty is abolished, peace is secured and taxes are reduced is a noble if obvious, ambition. Perhaps it even wins some votes.

But what prompts poll-takers to suggest he'll win by a margin reminiscent of Dwight D. Eisenhower's election victories is Johnson's hard-nosed political acumen.

In smashing congressional opposition to tax cuts and pushing through the most powerful Negro rights legislation in a century, he has shown he can get things done, possibly more than the late John F. Kennedy would have accomplished had he lived.

NOT ABOVE CRITICISM

The schoolboy debater who rose from poverty to build a fortune estimated at more than $20,000,000 is not above criticism. Some newspapermen still ask how much of the family fortune in Austin, Tex., television operations can be attributed to Lady Bird Johnson's business ability and how much to the fact that Johnson, when he was a senator, had a close association with the Federal Communications Commission, the TV regulatory agency.

Despite attempts to disown Bobby Baker, the smooth-talking fortune-raker who quit under fire as secretary to the senate majority leader, Johnson can't shake off the attacks of Republicans. They remind that he was the man who first hired Baker and who accepted an insurance premium kickback from a Baker acquaintance.

Johnson's advisers were aghast when he first bumbled the Panama Canal crisis by repudiating a Latin announcement of settlement. They moaned when he picked up his beagles by their ears, setting off a howl among dog-lovers.

And there were moments of disquiet when the boss was reported breaking speed limits by racing his car over ranch roads in Texas.

STAYS IN SADDLE

But the president has been able to ride out the criticism. And in little ways he manages to convey a picture of himself as a man who likes people.

Bob Kennedy Shoots For Vice-Presidency

NEW YORK (AP)—Attorney General Robert Kennedy

now thinks it is inevitable he will remain in government and he would be willing to run for vice-president or take a major cabinet post, Newsweek magazine reports.

The magazine says Kennedy's new attitude—he once said he might leave the U.S. to teach or write a book—was made plain in a six-hour interview. Newsweek says the late president's brother "obviously wants the job" of vice-president but appreciates, "without bitterness," the reasons why President Johnson might not want him as a running mate.

Kennedy is quoted as saying: "I should think I'd be the last man in the world he would want . . . because my name is Kennedy, because he wants a Johnson administration with no Kennedy in it, because we travel different paths, because I suppose some businessmen would object, and because I'd cost them a few votes in the South . . . I don't think as many as some say, but some."

The magazine says Kennedy also would "jump at" the posts of either state secretary or defence secretary if they should become vacant, and would be interested in becoming ambassador to the Soviet Union, a job the late president once discussed with him.

Zorin Lumps Foes Together

MOSCOW (Reuters)—Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Valerian Zorin, who heads the Soviet delegation at the Geneva disarmament conference, has attacked the Western powers and Communist China together for their opposition to Soviet disarmament moves.

Zorin said in an article in the government newspaper Izvestia says the Chinese leaders had ranged themselves "in company with the most aggressive imperialist circles, hindering every means of easing international tension."

Zorin's criticism of the West was hardly less severe.

He Returned Historic Heritage

By NORMAN CHIBBENS

The world of Mungo Martin, artist, wood-carver and chief of the Kwakwaka'wakw, became part of British Columbia's history when an exhibition of his paintings was opened by Lieutenant-Governor George Pearkes Monday afternoon.

"He was a great artist who reproduced the legends of his people in a vivid and striking manner," Mr. Pearkes said, "and his greatest memorial is that he has revived this art among the young Indians of today, and those who will follow them."

The ceremony took place in Thunderbird House, on the third floor of the Hudson's Bay store, where Chief Mungo's work will be on view to the public until July 11.

The same ceremony also marked the posthumous award of the Canada Medal—for outstanding service to the arts, humanities and social sciences—to Chief Mungo, who died here on Aug. 16, 1962.

First Indian

He is the first Indian to receive the Canada Medal and this was noted by Stuart Keate, B.C. member of the Canada Council.

Mr. Keate presented the medal to Mrs. Helen Hunt, Chief Mungo's adopted daughter.

Wearing the ceremonial red and black robes of her tribe, Mrs. Hunt bowed as she received the medal from Mr. Keate.

"My family will always be deeply proud of this honor," she said.

Mrs. Hunt then handed the medal to Dr. Clifford Carl, director of the B.C. Provincial Museum, where it will later be displayed with the works of Chief Mungo.

No Bitterness

Mr. Keate quoted from the citation accompanying the award of the Canada Medal to Chief Mungo and said it referred to him as "a wise and gentle man—a man without bitterness" whose greatest wish was to preserve his native culture.

He congratulated the Hudson's Bay Company on its enterprise and said he was proud to be associated with it.

The lieutenant-governor said the greatest memorial to Chief Mungo was his revival of Indian art among the young Indians of today. He had seen some of their work recently and was deeply impressed by their highly artistic character.

"There is something of the Emily Carr tradition in their blending of colors, and much of this is to be seen in the work that is pictured here today."

Revived Art

Mr. Pearkes said Chief Mungo had revived an art which had almost dropped out of existence and had aroused "an awakening interest among the white people of British Columbia."

Dr. Clifford Carl said Chief Mungo left a heritage of art which is now scattered around the world.

the Indians of British Columbia."

Colin Graham, curator of Greater Victoria Art Gallery, told how a committee had been set up to create a memorial to Chief Mungo in Thunderbird Park. It was fitting, he said, that a native Indian, Bill Reid of Vancouver, should have been chosen to design a copper plaque for this memorial.

The exhibition highlights paintings by Chief Mungo for the Provincial Museum and the University of British Columbia, as well as photographs of the chief at work.

Here are the foundations of all Kwakwaka'wakw art, painted in the clear, vigorous outlines and forms which characterize Kwakwaka'wakw art and are usually limited to the traditional colors of black, red, green and yellow.

Each animal is depicted within the tenets of Kwakwaka'wakw tradition—the dorsal fin and the blow hole for the killer whale; distinctive beaks, feathers and claws for the birds; fins, scales and a rudder-like tail for swimming sea creatures.

Ceremonial Mask

Arresting examples on view are a ceremonial mask depicting the Raven and the Q'olos—two supernatural birds featured in Kwakwaka'wakw mythology; the Sea Eagle with curved eagle beak and pointed wings; and the Sea Lion, distinguished by its massive flippers.

The exhibit of photographs includes a study of Chief Mungo and his late son, David, fitting a cannibal dance mask on Henry Hunt in Thunderbird Park.

There is also a photo of the World's Tallest Totem Pole, 127 feet seven inches high, sponsored by the Victoria Times in 1956, and a reproduction of the 100-foot Centennial totem carved by Chief Mungo which stands in Windsor Great Park, England.

Chief Mungo's birth date is unknown, but it is thought to have been around 1880. He learned to carve as a boy but for much of his life he fished to make a living.

Chief Carver

In the late 40s he was asked to supervise a totem pole restoration program at the University of British Columbia. Later he was made chief carver for the Provincial Museum.

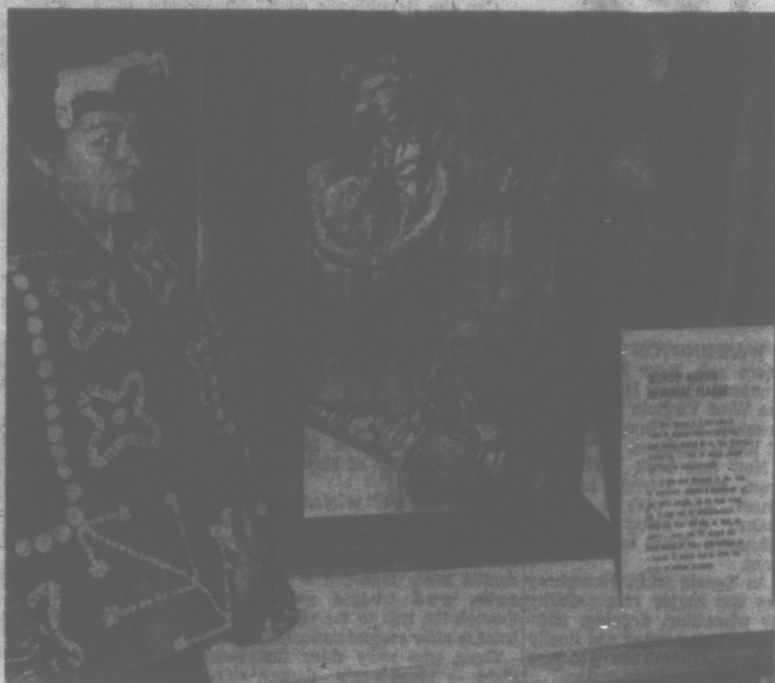

When he died here in 1962, his last rites were held inside the great ceremonial house he had built and officially installed 10 years before.

When he was carried by a naval vessel to his burial in Alert Bay, all the flags in Esquimalt were dropped to half mast.

Examples of his work are found in Vancouver's Maritime Museum; the Peace Park at Blaine, Washington, and at Totem Pole Park, UBC.

STREET DECORATIONS PROMISED

Festive Yule Week Planned

A week of festive activities will be planned for next Christmas in Victoria.

The Visitors' Bureau decided

Monday to name a committee to plan the week.

The Jaycees' annual home-lighting contest will probably be tied in with other activities.

Mayor R. B. Wilson told bureau directors the city will be "glad to co-operate with street decorations."

He said:

"They have left a lot to be desired over the last few years."

"MADRID GRAS"

Director Nick Renard also suggested five "gala days" on the marl grass system" between Dominion Day and July 4.

"July 1 is one of the dearest days in Victoria," he said. "The capital city of B.C. hasn't a thing to offer the visitor. All the other little cities, hamlets and towns go all out."

$60,000 for Hotel From Big Convention

Empress Hotel manager Leslie Parkinson told Visitors' Bureau directors Monday a recent convention meant $60,000 cash to the hotel.

He said the 584 Po Beta Phi fraternity convention between June 21-27 at the Empress was the biggest ever handled in the hotel.

Mr. Parkinson said the women also left "a considerable amount of money" downtown. "You should have seen the parcels they went home with," he said.

He suggested that every convention in the hotel be greeted by a civic official.

Directors also learned that a fund-raising campaign is being carried out on a personal-visit basis among doctors, dentists, lawyers and other professional people.

Mayor Wilson told directors the bureau has the confidence of businessmen "to a greater degree than it has had in several years."

Oswald Alone Says Kennedy

KRAKOW (AP)—U.S. Attorney-General Robert F. Kennedy said Monday Lee Harvey Oswald killed his brother, President John F. Kennedy, and "there is no question that he did it on his own and by himself."

"I believe it (the assassination) was done by a man named Oswald who was a misfit in society," Kennedy told a group of civic leaders and students in this southern Polish city.

Aides said it was the first time the head of the U.S. justice department has spoken publicly about who killed his brother in Dallas, Tex., last Nov. 22.

Estate of $50,391

UNITED PASTOR CHARGED

CHATHAM, Ont. (CP)—A 45-year-old United Church minister was released in $1,000 personal bail Monday after being charged on eight counts of contributing to juvenile delinquency.

Rev. Russell Horsburgh was remanded to July 8 without plea.

C. E. Perkins, defence counsel, said the charges were to the effect that Mr. Horsburgh had knowingly and wilfully contributed to juvenile delinquency by promoting, encouraging and providing accommodation where sexual intercourse could take place.

Mr. Horsburgh, married and with two sons, organized the Shuffle Shop in the church basement shortly after his arrival in Chatham four years ago. The club was a Friday night affair for teenagers who had been involved with the law.

The members, about 25 boys and girls, danced to records, played billiards and conducted discussions on many subjects, including sex and teen-age dating. Mr. Horsburgh supervised the meetings.

'Please Lower Your Sights'

Victoria aldermen may have their eyes fixed on the stars of downtown beautification and improvement but they were neatly brought down to earth today by a city ratepayer.

"Now that the capital budget has been approved... the floral baskets hung in place... the downtown boulevard trees thriving... may I suggest the civic administration bring its sights down to lower levels for consideration—the condition of our sidewalk pavements," wrote Mrs. N. H. Smith, 219 Vancouver.

As a person who had been injured by tripping over some broken sidewalk, she said she was very conscious of the poor condition of numerous downtown areas. After enumerating a few sections, and adding she could supply more examples, Mrs. Smith concluded her cutting letter:

"The city of Victoria is the loveliest in Canada in beauty, cleanliness and hospitality... that is why I should like to see it brought up to a par with our neighboring cities (Vancouver and Seattle) whose sidewalks... are flawless within the business centres."

LONG-RANGE JETS TAKE OVER

SAC Closes Bases in Canada

EDMONTON (CP)—Long-range jet aircraft have eliminated the need for United States Strategic Air Command refueling bases in Canada and the last four in Canada will officially close here Wednesday. The last of 200 USAF personnel will be transferred to various fueling stations in the U.S. after the United States personnel leave. The long-range KC-135 jet tanker takes over from propeller-type tank aircraft. The base at Namas was constructed in 1960 at a cost of $3,000,000. The buildings likely will be occupied by RCAF units.

GYROS OFFER A SPORTING CHALLENGE

Past president of Victoria's Gyros, Don Ross (left), invites business associate Mike Turyk to try his "luck" at Gyro Club's hole-in-one tournament this week. Turyk, who took up golf only three years ago after considerable urging from Ross, already has five "aces" to his credit, including three in a recent five-week span. Ross, an avid golfer for over 40 years and with only one ace to his credit, dares Turyk to try for No. 6. That Turyk promises to do a Gyro hole-in-one carnival at Mattick's Farm. It starts Wednesday and winds up Saturday. A charity auction will be held Thursday night.

McKinley Meets Stolle In Wimbledon Big One

LONDON (CP)—Defending Wimbledon tennis champion Chuck McKinley of the United States has entered the men's semi-finals facing the same opponent he beat for the title last year.

McKinley, No. 2 seed in the championships, earned his semi-final berth by defeating Abe Segal of South Africa 6-3, 6-3, 4-6, 6-4 Monday.

His way to the final is barred by rangy Australian Fred Stolle, who lost to the St. Louis player in the 1963 final.

They will meet in their semi-final match Wednesday.

Stolle, the No. 6 seed, paved his way to Wednesday's match with a 6-3, 7-5, 6-3 victory over Christian Kuhnke of West Germany Monday.

Other semi-finalists are Australia's Roy Emerson, the No. 1 seed, who defeated fellow countryman Bob Hewitt 6-1, 6-4, 6-4, and West Germany's Wilhelm Bungert, who upset fourth-seeded Rafael Osuna of Mexico 6-4, 6-2, 6-3.

Bungert's surprise victory Monday made him the toast of the Wimbledon crowds for the second straight year.

Last year, on the same court and in the same quarter-final round, the tall West German defeated Emerson, then, as now, the top seed.

Bungert will meet Emerson again, but this time in the semi-finals.

Although there was no women's singles play Monday, two U.S. girls stayed in the running for the doubles title.

Billie Jean Moffitt of Long Beach, Calif., and Karen Susman of San Antonio, Tex., second-seeded to win the doubles, had little trouble getting into the fourth round with a win over Mary Ann Elsel of St. Louis and Le Pericelli of Italy.

Russians REBUKED

In another political aside to the current Wimbledon championships, the All-England Lawn Tennis Championship committee Monday rebuked two Russians for winning a doubles match although they knew they would withdraw from the next round because they had to play South Africans.

The committee said it had suggested that Sergei Likhachev and Arina Dmitrieva should have retired at match point in its contest against Britons Phil Curtis and Virginia Wade. The Russian pair won 6-1, 6-4 but refused to meet the South African duo of Tim Ryan and Pat Walkden because of their country's apartheid policies.

A statement issued by the All-England Club said: "The committee feels that in all fairness Simon Belitz Gelman and Mr. Andriev, the Russian manager and trainer, were advised that should Likhachev and Dmitrieva win their previous match, they would meet a South African pair in their next match and if they intended to withdraw should retire at match-point in the previous match. It is regretted this advice was not accepted."

Tugmen Planted Firmly in Cellar

Nanaimo overcame a one-goal deficit and then turned on the power Monday, rolling to a 17-8 Senior "B" Lacrosse League victory over Foul Bay Tugmen at Memorial Arena.

Bob Shires laced five goals and Bill Good four as Nanaimo strengthened its hold on the league lead and left the winless (in eight games) Tugmen even more firmly planted in the cellar.

Tugmen held a 3-2 margin in the first quarter, and then the mid-Islanders turned on the steam to leave the Tugs swamped 8-3 at the half and 13-7 at the three quarter mark.

Joe Mazzini, Don Morelli and Mike Good scored two goals each for Nanaimo, while Gary Whitcomb and Gordie Bamford rounded out the score sheet with singles.

Tugmen scoring came from Ed Steele and Darrell McIntyre with two goals each, and Bob Coutts, Stu Walker, Bill Wilson and Ron Marshall with singles.

Next game: Thursday — Jokers at Nanaimo.

LIONS' HOME GAMES ON EIDOPHOR AGAIN

The Lions will roar in '64—on Victoria's Royal Theatre wide screen at least.

T. Eaton Co., sponsor of the Lions' home games on the slick Eidophor screen at the Royal, will open season ticket sales Friday for fans who watched last year. Deadline is July 15. After that it's first-come, first-served. There will be two exhibition and eight league games.

Fans purchasing tickets before July 20 will be eligible for a draw entitling the winner to a trip for two by air to the Grey Cup game in Toronto—plus two game tickets.

As a "bonus" to ticket holders, a refund will be made if more than one-quarter of any game is lost because of transmitting trouble.

NEW UNITED MANAGER ... PLANS TO SCAN MINORS

Fred Magee Has Positive Approach

Fred Magee has a major rebuilding job ahead of him, but instead of worrying, he is doing something about it.

Magee has been named to succeed Wally Milligan as manager of Victoria United. With the job comes the task of rebuilding the squad for another run at the Pacific Coast Soccer League championship.

Magee, who was given the position after an intensive search through local soccer ranks, will first have to find replacements for goalie Barry Sadler, and halfbacks Ollie Owens and George Wright.

Sadler is going to New Westminster; Owens is also leaving Victoria, and Wright will not be commuting from Vancouver as he has done for the past two seasons.

"It's too bad to lose players who have been as good as Sadler and Wright," Magee said, "but Sadler is moving to the Mainland and Wright is living there now, and I don't go for the idea of commuters on a club. They can't practice with the team and I don't think it works out."

Magee was vice-president of United last year. He has definite ideas on how a club should be operated. He spent five years as manager-coach of the old Eagles first division team.

Sadler's replacement will probably be Larry DeCosta of Gorge Hotel. DeCosta tried out for United last season.

Dave Stothard will be back with United to fill some of the gap left by Owens and Wright.

"Stothard is the best player in the Pacific Coast League. He can play every position but goal, and he was the club's top scorer two seasons ago. He has assured me he has no intention of playing with anyone but United," Magee said.

There had been a rumor that Stothard would line up with a Vancouver club.

Former Victoria player Volker Stoldt has moved back to the Island and may play with United, and Magee is taking close looks at the juvenile ranks—particularly players such as Tony Quinn and Marty Taylor, of Canadian Scottish.

This is a big part of Magee's rebuilding program—keeping check on the minor teams.

"The thing I want to do is keep in touch with district league teams, perhaps practising with a different team each week, so we can keep a line on who is playing and who can help us," Magee said.

OUCH!

Dodgers 'Bust Of The Year'

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Los Angeles Dodgers, last year's National League champions, returned from a road trip in ninth place Monday, to read this headline:

"4 in row to Giants—a civic disgrace."

"Dodgers are bust of the year."

The story under the banner in The Herald-Examiner said the team's play this year has been about as interesting as a peanut butter sandwich. It added:

"The citizenry won't tolerate the kind of baseball the Dodgers have been dispensing. Comparing them, in fact, to peanut butter sandwiches is giving peanut butter the worst of it."

The club lost four straight to the arch-rival Giants in San Francisco, largely due to lack of timely hitting.

Manager Walter Alton held a closed meeting with the team before Sunday's game and urged players to try harder "as a matter of personal pride."

"I'm not blaming any individual," he said, "because we've all been guilty. There have been times when we dogged it, and to me that's the most disgusting thing about our situation."

Melvin Durslag, Herald-Examiner sports editor, wrote: "Indisputably the Dodgers have been a dog team ... sheltered by its general manager who has told critics repeatedly that he doesn't wish to put the knock on the boys because they are enduring pain privately."

"If they are, they deserve it ... in spades. They are the principals in America's greatest farce which began with the sale of more than $4,000,000 worth of tickets before the season even began. ... The greatest advance sale in the history of baseball."

Boston's Radatz Pours Fireball at AL Batters

(Times News Services)

There's no relief in sight for the rest of the American League from the monster that stalks the Boston bullpen.

The sight of tireless Dick Radatz walking to the mound has become as familiar to Bostonians as Fenway Park itself—only much more assuring.

Radatz appeared for the third time in two days Monday night and with the usual result, another Red Sox victory. The huge righthander mowed down Kansas City Athletics for 2½ innings to preserve a 4-3 decision and collect his 13th save of the year.

The Monster, who worked scoreless relief in Sunday's doubleheader has appeared in five of the last six Boston games and 40 games this season. At this pace, Radatz is a cinch to shatter the major league record for appearances in one season of 75 by William White of Cincinnati back in 1973.

There is no doubt that without Radatz the Red Sox would be far below their current fifth-place station. Radatz, who boasts a 6-3 record, has either won or saved more than half of the Sox' 36 victories. In the month of June alone, he has appeared in 16 games.

'Gun Only Way'

Monday night was a typical Radatz performance. He entered the game in the seventh inning with two men out, the bases loaded and Boston's lead reduced from four runs to one. He quickly extinguished the rally by getting pinchhitter Doc Edwards on a fly ball, then set down the A's on two hits for the rest of the game.

After a recent Radatz save, an official of the losing club said: "The only way to stop the guy is with a gun, I guess. And then I suppose before he keeled over he'd strike out one last batter."

Beneficiary of Radatz' performance was Earl Wilson, who gained credit for his eighth victory. Slender Ed Bressoud was the Boston slugging star with a double, a triple and two run-batted-in.

Orioles on Wing

Baltimore ran its win streak to seven and increased its league lead to 4½ games over the idle Yankees by whipping the Twins 6-3; the White Sox blitzed the Indians 5-1 with a 10th-inning surge and the Senators stopped the Tigers 5-3 in the only other games.

Meanwhile in the National League, Houston whipped the Phillies, 6-1; the Braves battered the Cardinals, 7-4; the Reds drubbed the Cubs, 6-1; the Mets rallied to nip the Giants 4-3; and the Dodgers outslugged the Pirates, 7-6.

Robin Roberts limited the Twins to seven hits, including three homers, in the Orioles' victory. Norm Selburn drove in three of Baltimore's runs with a two-run homer and an infield out in the seventh-hit Oriole attack which was aided and abetted by some sloppy Minnesota fielding. Tony Oliva hit his 15th and 16th homers for the Twins, and major league leader Harmon Killebrew slugged his 26th.

Colwood Juniors Upset Victoria

Royal Colwood upset Victoria Golf Club 6-3 Monday night in match play at Colwood.

Only Victoria golfers to win their matches were Gerald Wordell and Jeff Pinniger.

CITY TEAMS EYE $1,000 TOURNEY

Two Victoria all-star teams warm up for the opening of the Victoria Amateur Baseball Association's $1,000 invitational tournament with a Dominion Day exhibition Wednesday.

The teams, one headed by Jiff Moody and the other by Herb Wetherall, take to Royal Athletic Park at 2 p.m. in their final chance for a complete game before Friday's tournament opener.

The teams are made up of the cream of the Senior Amateur League crop, and will be battling six other British Columbia teams in the run for $500 first-place money in the first of what the VABA hopes will become an annual tournament.

CHAMAINUS IN OFFER

Herb Wetherall's Victorians open the tourney at 8 p.m. Friday against Chamaunus.

The second game, slated for 10 a.m. Saturday, pits Vancouver's Bollermakers Union against Hane-Hammond.

Moody's half of the Victoria entry goes against Port Moody at 1 p.m. in the third game, and Vancouver takes on Courtenay Arbutus at 4 p.m. in the last of the first-round games.

Semi-final tussles of the single loss elimination competition are set for 7 p.m. Saturday and 10 a.m. Sunday.

FINAL ON SUNDAY

The final seventh game goes at 2:30 Sunday. All tourney games will be played at Royal Athletic Park.

The Senior Amateur League schedule will be suspended for the weekend, with regular play resuming next week.

In Monday's game, McLarens climbed out of the league basement by dumping first-place Transport Workers 5-3.

Whoa! Rocks Near First!

Victoria Shamrocks have suddenly found themselves in an unfamiliar situation.

They are within two games of a first place tie in the Inter-City Lacrosse League, and they are faced with the most important home-and-home series of the season.

Wins against first place New Westminster at Memorial Arena Wednesday night, and against the Royal City crew in New Westminster Thursday will give the Rocks a share of first place—something they have not seen since 1958.

ONLY MURROE OUT

Rocks will be at full strength for the series, with the exception of Bill Munroe, out with a stomach ulcer.

In addition, Jim Watson and Tom Collett, who missed Saturday's game with Nanaimo will be on hand against the mainlanders.

Ed Kowalyk will be out to make this series as successful as possible—the games will be his last two with the Shamrocks before leaving on a six-week tour of Europe.

The series will also be important for New Westminster's Paul Parnell. He will have a chance to take over the lead in the individual scoring race.

Jim McNeill leads Victoria scorers with 32 points made up of 20 goals and 12 assists.

Game time Wednesday is 8 p.m.

LEAFS COMIN' STAFF TELLS CITY BUREAU

Toronto Maple Leafs ARE shifting their Denver franchise in the Western Hockey League to Victoria—the city's Visitors' Bureau says so.

Bureau commissioner Alan Maclean has received a letter from Leafs' president Stafford Smythe saying "We are moving a team to Victoria."

That's the first official word out of Toronto. Or Smythe.

Smythe wrote: "Although other members of the Western Hockey League are skeptical, I believe that the people of Victoria can prove their willingness to support the team we are putting in there."

IN DAWN OR DARKNESS 'TOO COLD-BLOODED'

ADELAIDE, Australia (AP)—"If topos bathing suits ever become really popular I shall not be swimming in them," said Dawn Fraser. "I think it's all too cold-blooded."

The Australian Olympic champion and holder of several world records in freestyle swimming added: "I know it has been proved that people swim faster in the nude. As a matter of fact my fastest 25 yards ever was swum in the nude in a private pool. Women officials clocked my race."

"If they're going to use topos suits why not start with kiddies? Let kiddies in even older ages wear them and then teen-agers would be able gradually to wear them without too many raised eyebrows."

Miss Fraser, winner of the Olympic 100-metre freestyle gold medal in 1956 and 1960, has been training for two months since her recovery from a neck injury in a car accident that killed her mother.

Victoria Trio Will Compete In Bisley

Three Victoria soldiers will compete with the Canadian Army rifle team at the Bisley matches in England, July 6-18.

Sgt. Edward Zwolok, Cpl. Heinz Specht and Cpl. Frank Trenta, now stationed in West Germany with the 1st Battalion, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, will join the 12-man Canadian team in the Commonwealth shoot.

Zwolok won a silver medal in the 1956 Prix Leclerc shoot in Germany. Specht won the regular army championship in 1963.

Mononucleosis Strikes Canada's Shot-Put Ace

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dave Steen, 22-year-old shotputter and one of Canada's brightest hopes in the Olympic Games in Tokyo this year, has mononucleosis.

It is not yet known whether the exhausting disease will knock Steen out of the Olympics.

His brother Bob, a track coach in neighboring Burnaby, said today that Steen has been unable to train hard and that he would not go to the games unless he could give his best.

NO. 5 IN U.S.

Dave is doing post-graduate work at the University of Oregon where he graduated last year. He has done little competing this year although, until he was struck by the disease a month ago, had kept in training.

Steen is rated No. 5 shotputter in the United States. At one time he has held every Canadian shot put record. His best distance of almost 63 feet is still well short of the world record, however.

Mononucleosis is a blood disease similar to leukemia. It is curable but it leaves the sufferer in an exhausted condition for periods ranging from two weeks to four months. It makes such training virtually impossible.

The British Columbia Olympic trials will be held here July 17 and 18 and the Canadian trials at St. Lambert, Que., Aug. 7 and 8.

"Dave could probably win the B.C. trials with his left hand," said Bob who coached Steen in suburban Burnaby before he went to the University of Oregon.

"But he wouldn't go to Japan for the ride. He wouldn't go if he was not capable of giving his best."

Training was a religion with Dave, not a sport.

"He's a fanatic about weight training. His whole training has been aimed at the Olympics."

Alston Names Casey, Hutch

CINCINNATI (AP) — Casey Stengel of New York Mets and Fred Hutchinson of Cincinnati Reds were named Monday to be the National League team coaches at the major league All-Star game July 7.

The appointments were made by Walt Alston who, as manager of the 1963 pennant-winning Los Angeles Dodgers, will manage the National League All-Star team.

Of Montreal, Matti Jutila of Sudbury, Ont., and Roger Doner of Scarborough, a suburb of Toronto.

Joe Schleimer of Toronto, has been named coach of the team.

Koji Hirabayashi, a 22-year-old Tokyo-born wrestler who was eligible for the Canadian team because his father was born in Canada, says speed and tackling are essential in Olympic competition.

Hirabayashi was named to the team after winning the 125-pound weight division last month during the Canadian amateur wrestling championships and Olympic trials at the University of Saskatchewan.

He travelled to Saskatoon from Japan at his own expense to seek a berth on the Olympic team. He is ineligible for the Japanese team.

Other members of the Canadian team are Phil Oberlander

Remember when Bonded Stock came in that plain old bottle?

Well it doesn't anymore. That fine old bottle has launched its last sip. We've designed a new container for Gooderham's Bonded Stock. Tall and refined with classic lines. (Our whisky's now in the best shape ever). And we age Bonded Stock longer now as well. To make every drop just a little more mellow. One thing though. Bonded Stock's smooth lightness we don't change. Our blenders know a good thing when they taste it. Judging from the number of people who buy Bonded Stock Whisky, so does the rest of the country.

BUSINESS VIEWS

Gas New Export To Japanese

By GORDON BELL
Times Business Editor

Westcoast Transmission president R. B. Stewart revealed in the company annual report this week that negotiations have actually been started with Japanese interests for the export of liquefied methane gas to Japan.

The Westcoast plan would be to liquefy "substantial volumes" of the LMG, which would be extracted from B.C. natural gas, at a tidewater plant in the Vancouver area and ship it to Japan in large refrigerated ships.

Confirmation by Mr. Stewart of a definite plan puts two Western Canadian companies into the export market for gas liquids.

Westcoast's rival is newly-formed Mountain Pacific Pipeline Ltd., an Alberta group headed by Peter Bawden of Calgary.

WESTCOAST LEAD

Westcoast would seem to have the lead in the race since it already has the pipeline to the coast as well as substantial quantities of gas. The Bawden group will have to build a $47 million pipeline, from Edson, Alta., to Port Moody along with the liquefying plant and will have to purchase its gas, in this case propane, from processing plants in the Edson area.

Mountain Pacific does not intend to market the LPG itself but reportedly has a tie-in with one of the major international oil companies to handle sales in Japan and other areas. It is expected that the major company will also take a share in financing the deal.

ISLAND MARKET

Both Westcoast and Mountain Pacific could be contenders for a market closer to home, Vancouver Island, and the chances that a pipeline will be built to carry natural gas here from the mainland seem dimmer than ever.

What has spurred Westcoast and the new company in their ventures is the remarkable rise in use of liquid gas products in Japan in recent years. Consumption has almost doubled in the last three years, from 1,040,000 tons in 1962 to an estimated 2,011,000 tons this year.

The Japanese transport industry is being rapidly converted to gas liquid power and the booming chemical industry is also making heavy demands on available supplies.

NO PROBLEM

Transportation of liquefied gas no longer seems to be much of a problem. Britain, with technical assistance from American interests, pioneered the use of refrigerated ships where the gas is held at the very low temperature of minus 260 degrees Fahrenheit. The gas liquids are secured from the Sahara fields and shipped to the Thames area.

There they are pumped ashore into insulated storage tanks and then fed through evaporators into a distribution system.

Most of the experts in the field concede that the business of shipping gas liquids by surface vessels is going to grow enormously in the next few years, and that the plans for submarine pipelines are generally being shelved.

The difficulty with a pipeline is that it is a fixed installation which has to be built big enough to anticipate demand growth for a long time ahead, and at the same time to run economically while demand is still low. With refrigerated tankers it is a more simple matter to add additional vessels as demand grows.

New $12 Million Grain Elevator For Vancouver

REGINA (CP)—The Saskatchewan Wheat Pool will build a 5,000,000-bushel terminal elevator at Vancouver, C. W. Gibbings, president of the giant grain-handling co-operative, said today.

Mr. Gibbings said preliminary work on plans is to begin immediately and it is hoped the new terminal, costing about $12,000,000, will be in operation within two years.

He said the terminal will increase Vancouver's grain-handling capacity by about 20 per cent, meeting demands of expanding markets in the Pacific. There has been some congestion in shipping facilities at Vancouver in recent record export years, Mr. Gibbings said.

The pool now has a 1,650-bushel terminal in Vancouver on a lease basis.

Grain shipped to the west coast from Saskatchewan pool elevators has been 30,000,000 to 45,000,000 bushels in each of the last three years.

The Alberta pool has handled the bulk of the Saskatchewan wheat which can't be accommodated in the existing Saskatchewan pool terminal.

It is hoped the new terminal will allow the Saskatchewan pool to handle all its own grain at Vancouver.

EXCHANGE CHANGED

CALGARY (CP)—F. G. Elves, president of the Calgary Stock Exchange, said Monday night that the Exchange Building at 7th Ave. S.W. will be demolished and replaced by a modern, multi-storey building. Mr. Elves made the announcement at a meeting marking the 15th anniversary of the founding of the Calgary Stock Exchange incorporated by the Alberta Legislature in 1914.

Our seats lean over backwards to please you

Like all Rambler features, our exclusive reclining seats are designed to give "maximum usefulness to the user." We don't regard them simply as a place to sit. They are built to be an asset to your driving.

You can't be relaxed and alert if you're forced into a tiring, awkward position. And seats that just move back and forth aren't good enough. They only allow for leg length. Everyone has his own natural posture and Rambler seats recline at a touch to adjust to it. Their coil-spring construction supports you firmly. And their chair height places you right up where you have a clear, unobstructed view of the road ahead.

Reclining seats are our most distinctive comfort feature. But they are only one of many, each a part of Rambler's detail quality. It's this attention to detail that has made Rambler Canada's best car value.

Our seats may lean over backwards but we keep moving forward. Spend a pleasant hour looking over the newest Rambler features. Visit your nearest dealer soon.

Export Totals Climb

British Columbia exports were up and imports down in 1963, the trade department said Monday. A 228-page sheet of statistics showed exports through B.C. ports were worth $1,399,000,000 last year compared with $1,245,000,000 in 1962.

Imports, destined for markets across Canada, last year were worth $458,000,000, down from the 1962 value of $477,000,000.

Major gains in wheat, sawn lumber and wood pulp accounted for most of the increase in exports. Wheat was worth $315,000,000 against $273,600,000 in 1962.

Most import commodities varied only slightly in value. Agricultural food products rose $11,000,000 and aircraft and parts fell $26,000,000.

The United States was the biggest market for exports—$556,000,000. Principal exports there were crude petroleum, newsprint, paper, sawn lumber, natural gas and wood pulp.

Japan received $256,000,000 of exports, up 45 per cent from the previous year, and the United Kingdom third with $194,000,000.

Leading imports were Bananas, green coffee, raw sugar, tractors and parts, cars, machinery, fuel oil and bananas from the U.S., U.K., Japan, and the European Common Market.

Castro's Sister Defects

(Times News Services)
MEXICO CITY — Fidel Castro's sister Juanita has defected, charging that the Cuban prime minister betrayed his revolution and sold out Cuba to the Russians.

She compared the Castro government with Nazi Germany, saying that terrorism, religious persecution and espionage were the rule.

"The people of Cuba are nailed to a cross of torment imposed by international communism," Juanita Castro Ruz said Monday night in an emotion-charged statement to Mexican television commentator Guillermo Vela.

With tears in her eyes and a breaking voice, the 41-year-old woman read a six-page denunciation of the Cuban regime headed by her brothers Fidel and Raul.

Miss Castro, one of seven Castro brothers and sisters, refused to say how she came to Mexico from Cuba. She may have been aboard a Cuban airlines plane that arrived Monday. Her sister Emma has lived in Mexico City since her marriage three years ago to a Mexican engineer.

ABANDONED IDEALS

Miss Castro said she had supported her brother's revolution against dictator Fulgencio Batista by collecting money, arms and medicine both in Cuba and abroad. After his victory she dedicated herself to building schools and hospitals, she said, but she soon realized Castro had abandoned the ideals of his revolution and "we were being deceived."

She said there are now 75,000 political prisoners in Cuba and the island is "an enormous prison surrounded by water."

Deteriorating conditions in the last few months finally forced her to flee, she said.

She reported the Cuban people lack food, clothing and other essentials and wonder what happened to the $63,000,000 in medicines which Castro received in exchange for prisoners captured in the 1961 Bay of Pigs invasion.

Exile sources said Miss Castro had been investigated twice by her brother's secret police on Castro's orders — once because of an alleged link with a black market operator and then for her work as a government department head.

'WORSE THAN GESTAPO'

Miss Castro said she had helped others "escape from the inferno of today's Cuba," adding Castro's secret police are "comparable to the worst elements of Hitler's Gestapo."

Castro's regime, she continued, subjects political prisoners to inhuman treatment, directs subversive infiltration throughout Latin America and persecutes churches.

"I myself witnessed how my brother's militiamen opened fire upon a Catholic demonstration in which I participated," she said. "I saw the boy carrying the banner of the Virgin of Charity beaten to death by these men."

She said anti-Castro groups inside Cuba are "anxious to receive help as soon as possible" but are not strong enough to bring down a government "supported by thousands of Russian troops."

She called on the Organization of American States to support "definite action" against the Castro regime.

HELPS CUBANS LEAVE

"I helped many Cubans leave the hell that is Cuba today. I helped by arms and with counter-revolutionaries. I helped send medicines and food to political prisoners and tried to save some from being shot."

She said she maintained her government friends to pass information to anti-Castro groups.

"A friend very high in the government told me the state's security department has an important section dedicated solely to teaching espionage and guerrilla in Latin America."

GOLD RIVER—We are sheltering from the persistent West Coast dewfall (about 150 inches a year, they tell me) in the lee of a fat and silvery Vancouver Island Coach Lines carrier which has rolled us 56 miles from Campbell River.

Behind us are a canyon I'd hate to tumble into, a waterfall that in really wet weather gives passing cars a free wash, and a sequence of very good gravelled roads travelled five days a week by logging trucks.

Far back on the wonderfully scenic route we traversed this morning is Bert Jamieson, 78-year-old Elk River. Timber Company guest house caretaker. Bert hasn't been too well lately. Coach line drivers like Jack Gray who fetched us across, give Bert a horn blast going by. If he doesn't show, they stop to investigate.

People do things that way in this big and hearty land where Canadian brawn and foreign investment capital are expanding beach-heads in one of our last North American frontiers.

Below us, Tahsis Company's neat Gold River settlement meets the saltchuck. Alongside the dock, a coaster which will presently take us to Friendly Cove has just outraged a prin little green Amphib by rigging wire-rope slings under its belly and baling it up, out and down to the plank.

On Uchuck III's forward deck, a blue outboard hull jam-packed with a family's possessions, waits its turn. Two umbrellas handle poke from a shopping bag. A cardboard carton holds potted plants to brighten a habitation deep in the gut of some lost fiord.

There are other craft beside this pocket steamer whose name in very loose translation means "ten-kettle spring of medicinal water".

Messenger III—they must run heavy to triplets in these parts—lies snug to a float. She's a mission boat with texts lettered front and side on her white deck-house. Inshore of her, Tahsis general manager Bill Ford is splicing a line in the cockpit of his trim and lovely motor-sailor Tahola.

Within rifle range lie what may be the world's finest tyce salmon grounds, a sheltered reach where company hands and a few visiting anglers shake the little 50-pounders off the hook while waiting for a big fellow to strike.

This is Gold River, British Columbia outpost of an industrial giant called Esso Asiatic which rules its manifold interests from Copenhagen, Denmark.

Pole Crash Fatal

Car Passenger Dies At Campbell River

A 47-year-old man was killed when the car in which he was riding crashed into a power pole opposite the government wharf in Campbell River early this morning.

Dead is Douglas MacKenzie Alderson who recently moved to the island city.

RCMP said the driver of the car, Jose Antonio Matias of Campbell River, has been charged with criminal negligence.

Two passengers in the car, Clarence McCaskill and Howard Cameron, were injured in the crash. Neither is believed seriously hurt although Cameron is still in hospital.

Police said the accident occurred at 12:40 a.m. today.

Hearing Called

A public hearing will be held at the next regular meeting of the Equimault Council, into the application by Pacific Petroleum Ltd., for a gasoline service station at the junction of Equimault and Dunsuir. Council decided to take this course of an application by the firm for rezoning of the lot, to determine whether residents in the area would have any objections.

POLICE PATROL ASKED BY SEATTLE MAN

Hoodlums Scare Off Visiting Yachts

A Seattle yachtsman said today Victoria's Inner Harbor is gaining a reputation as a place not to visit because of youthful vandalism and rowdiness at night.

Burns Lindsey, a Seattle Yacht Club member who recently purchased Grouse Island off Campbell River, says many of his clubmates have said they will never return.

He says he does not feel safe because of teen-aged hoodlums who come down to the docks at night apparently looking for trouble. There is a lot of foul language and general unpleasantness, he contends.

But he thought there was a simple solution.

"Police cars must go past the harbor at least 20 times before midnight. I don't think it would be that much trouble for them to look over the wall once in a while," he says.

That might end the trouble. Mr. Lindsey cited many instances of trouble at the yacht floats.

THROWING BOTTLES

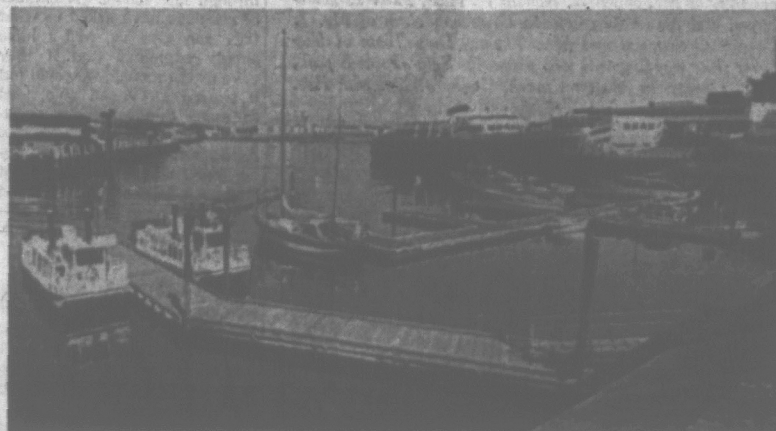

The other evening, says Mr. Lindsey, youths were throwing soft drink bottles up and down the dock.

"Recently a group of teenagers unfastened my spring line, but I woke up and chased them off," he says.

Had they unfastened his bow and stern lines, his $50,000 42-foot boat could have gone adrift with damaging results.

"Last year someone threw a beer bottle from the Causeway, but luckily it hit on the window frame of a boat up here from Portland."

"Next morning there was beer and broken glass all

Usually crowded at holiday, harbor is strangely deserted.

City Shocked by Refusal Of RCMP to Police Thetis

Constable Wouldn't Leave Car

City Hall officials today were dumbfounded by reports that the RCMP Colwood detachment refuses to police city-owned Thetis Lake Park in unorganized territory.

They said they would look into the situation after Vic-Van-Isle Kinsmen spokesman Alexander Grant told public works committee that recent vandalism at a temporary concession building brought an unsatisfactory investigation by RCMP.

Mr. Grant said he was told that an RCMP constable declined to get out of his car to investigate on the grounds that the detachment was purely a traffic squad and he could not leave the car radio.

'HARD TO BELIEVE'

"I just find that hard to believe," said Ald. Geoffrey Edgelow.

"I'm sure there must be some misunderstanding," said Mayor R. B. Wilson, "but the city does have to pay for guards during the day there and that just is one more point on how far the city taxpayers should go in providing a community park outside their boundaries."

$4,000 SOUGHT

The point came up during a Vic-Van-Isle Kinsmen request that the city provide $4,000 for a concrete block concession building which the club would operate to raise money for a $50,000 development program in the park. It would include dressing rooms, trail improvements, more parking space and a children's swimming beach.

HOW FAR?

"All this is very commendable but it raises the basic question of just how far the city must go in paying for a park outside its boundaries that is really a community park," said the mayor.

"This is a good example of the type of park that should be included in a regional parks system which I hope can be set up if the proposed joint services board is realized."

Committee tabled the club's request for report by parks administrator W. H. Warren and city manager Dennis Young.

Ballots Sealed by Deputy In Carpenter Strike Vote

A last-minute manoeuvre by deputy labor minister William Sands has averted a possible carpenters' strike but left principals unsure of the next move.

Mr. Sands Monday night took the rare step of sealing uncounted ballot boxes after a government-supervised strike vote among 350 carpenters at the Curling Rink.

The poll closed at 8 p.m. and Mr. Sands announced immediately his order to have the boxes sealed.

He said later: "There is every hope for a settlement if negotiations are resumed."

Mr. Sands said he has had the carpenters and the Victoria Building Industries Exchange (negotiating for contractors) together.

Boxes will remain sealed until negotiations have resumed, he said.

There is no limit on how long counting may be postponed, but Mr. Sands said the count cannot be delayed "unreasonably long."

B.C. Provincial Council of Carpenters secretary Art Leam said he "presumed negotiations will resume this week." He said union officials will have to study the move before commenting.

Contractor George Farmer said Mr. Sands seemed to feel "we could get together at the last minute."

"The department of labor has so many problems it will probably do anything to help the relationship between employer and employees," he said.

Vote supervisor W. T. McLaughlin could not remember when the last such move was made.

City manager Dennis Young said city council last November set a policy of allowing amateur groups to use the park free of charge except when they sell tickets to the public.

He said the 10 per cent gross and $7 for ticket sellers and takers provided by the city came nowhere near covering the city's maintenance costs but was levied as a matter of principle "so that public property cannot be used free of charge for financial gain."

"They could have the park free if they made no charge or just had a silver collection but they want to sell tickets," he said.

$10,442 Contract

Lord and Burham Co. Ltd. was awarded a $10,442 contract today for construction of a new greenhouse, approximately 100 by 27 feet in Beacon Hill Park. Its bid was lowest of three on a square footage basis, city parks committee was told.

TOPICS of the DAY

St. Andrew's and Caledonian Society will hold a picnic Wednesday at the Dominion Experimental Farm.

Members wishing transportation to be at Holyrood House at 11 a.m.

Next year's Canadian Civil Service Conference will be held in Victoria with Dr. H. M. Morrison, B.C. Civil Service commissioner, as chairman.

The group held its first annual meeting last week in Halifax, where Nova Scotia CS commissioner G. E. Perry was named president.

Tonight's television show Reach for the Top—a quiz show in which a local high school team is competing—will start half an hour early at 7 p.m.

The four-man team from local high schools competes in the finals tonight, and the show has been lengthened to provide time for presentation of $2,000 in scholarship prizes.

About 15 Boy Scouts of the 6th Douglas Scout Troop will hold a bottle drive Saturday morning on the Burnside-Wilkinson area.

They are raising funds for scouting activities.

Ask The Times

Q. About how much does Canada spend on national defence?

A. About 26 cents of every tax dollar goes to national defence.

Q. When did the Duke of Windsor abdicate the Throne of England? Where is he now living?

A. In 1936. He is now living in France.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve problems or legal questions. We will attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps or antiques. These should be submitted to a dealer.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the question along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

Victoria traffic committee today recommended that city council prohibit all parking in lanes behind buildings. Committee was told many of the lanes, used for deliveries, are blocked frequently by parked cars but police have no authority to issue tickets at present.

Winners of the recent Vic-Van-Isle Kinsmen Bridge tournament were: 1, Eric Horwood and Walter Allen; 2, Mrs. Lillian Heathfield and Simon Vanderjagt.

Group winners were: Mrs. Alma Halliday and Mrs. Florence Trace; George and Dorothy Colgate; Art Kay and Daniel Butler.

A man who recorded bets for a bookmaker paid a $200 fine in cash when he appeared in court today.

Clarence Foster, an employee of Blue Bell Confectionery, 799 Johnson Street, was found surrounded by "racing paraphernalia" when Detective Lorne Johnson walked into the back of the store on the afternoon of June 12.

Foster told Det. Johnson he only recorded the bets and then telephoned them to the bookmaker. He refused to tell police who the "bookie" was.

A homing pigeon owned by John Arnaud averaged about 24 miles an hour to win a race from Blue River to Victoria on Sunday.

The bird covered the 300 air miles in 12 hours, 13 minutes and 56 seconds.

In second place was Barnie Wooley's bird, with 12:14.56, and in third place was Charlie Wooley's bird at 12:16.13.

Seventeen members shipped 78 birds in the race.

Dick Nestleyn's pigeon won the second race that day from Birch Island, a distance of 265 air miles, in 11:32.12.

Runners up were: Dick Roe, 11:33.29; Harvey Robt, 11:49.16. There were 10 birds in the race.

A coroner's jury Monday found that Mrs. Charlotte Oliver died of asphyxia at Oak Lodge Private Hospital June 20.

The jury did not attach blame to anyone in the death of the 90-year-old woman. A post mortem showed she died of choking although it was first thought the cause of death was a heart attack.

Evidence showed hospital staff tried to revive Mrs. Oliver.

Two new appointments to the Victoria Chapter of the World Council of Churches were made at a recent meeting.

Rev. C. L. Streight was appointed to succeed the late Dr. H. K. Johnston, and Rev. C. Scott was appointed in place of Rev. W. A. Williams.

Books for school standing were given to seven Lochside School pupils recently by the Parent Auxiliary.

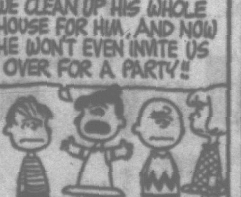

Winners for each grade, one to seven inclusive, were: Anne Kelly, Karl Phillips, Carolyn Fraser, Harris Taylor, Beth Johnston, Ann Briggs and Kristin Dunn.

Principles of a meeting in Room Eugene Ush, of Portland, will give a talk on "Infinite Way Principles" at meeting in Room 165, Empress Hotel, at 7:45 p.m. July 6, sponsored by the local group interested in the "Infinite Way" movement.

Canadian National Railway Pensioners will hold their annual picnic at 2 p.m. Friday in Beacon Hill Park.

Tea and coffee will be served. Members are to provide their own lunches.

DEAR ABBY...

They're No Hypocrites!

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Is it wrong to suggest "money" when relatives ask us what my husband wants for graduation? We are a struggling young couple who have scrimped to put my husband through law school. A number of relatives have asked us what they can give us, and I have simply explained that if they gave us the money, we could put it toward a TV set. We need so many things for our apartment. Our families are now furious with us because they say we sound money hungry. Most of our relatives would spend around $20 or $25 on a gift anyway. Do you think we committed a breach of etiquette?

CURIOUS: No. Those who ask what they may give are genuinely interested in giving something practical. Only a hypocrite would ask for a suggestion, and then be offended by an honest answer.

DEAR ABBY: I received an invitation to the graduation of a person I would not know if I saw him on the street. I am certain that he would not know me, either. I know his parents only slightly so I cannot for the life of me understand why I received this invitation. Am I expected to send a gift? Not knowing the person, it would be difficult to select an appropriate gift. I don't want to appear cheap and ignore the invitation. Have you any suggestions?

BEWILDERED: Under the circumstances, a message of congratulations is sufficient. Problems? Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif.

90069. For a personal reply, enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Hate to write letters? Send one dollar to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif., 90069, for Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for all Occasions."

THE BETTER HALF

By Bob Barnes

"It was a wrong number, but he tried to borrow twenty from me anyway."

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

There is nothing which is more damaging to health and also to good looks than worry and tension. They can make you feel absolutely exhausted, can cause you to break out in a rash and may even change your facial contour.

Yet many women are as tense as though they were ready for battle. The typical housewife has such varied responsibilities and is so constantly subjected to small but hectic crises in her daily life that she is extremely likely to be tense a lot of the time. If she has children, of course, the situation is even more complex.

A woman may not have any really big problems but she may waste tremendous amounts of energy by just feeling hurried and hectic. This can become a habit. Most of us get into this sort of a rut unless we take steps to avoid it.

There are a few habits which I have found to be helpful. Try not to fret over non-essentials. If the dress you had planned to wear to a party doesn't get back from the cleaner in time—well, wear something else, but don't waste energy on it.

If your child catches a cold, and the plumbing goes haywire and the strawberries you ordered are unusable and the plaster falls and Aunt Susie arrives with her two poodles on the eve of a dinner party which you had hoped would be attractive, don't cry. Just sit down in the middle of the mess, and laugh. Almost all hectic situations have an element of humor in them.

Try to be flexible. Don't take yourself too seriously. If you couldn't accomplish all you had planned to do today, then do it tomorrow. If you have to push yourself to the point of exhaustion to get away on a trip today, go tomorrow, or maybe even next week.

If you would like to have my booklet, "Individual Happiness," send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for it to Josephine Lowman in care of this newspaper.

SHOPPING GUIDE

If You're Vacation Bound Pack Along These Items

By PENNY SAVER

Due to an excess of heavy, bulky baggage (hair dryers and the like—you know how it is), my last year's summer vacation was nothing more than a series of maddening mishaps.

So, this year you can "bet your boots" that my suitcases will contain nothing more than the absolute essentials plus a number of handy, compact travel items.

That may sound like I'll end up with several suitcases filled with weight-adding articles, but when I tell you what they are, I'm sure you'll agree they will make any holiday an unadulterated pleasure.

First item is called a "bootnik." This is a handy, fold-away shoe buffer that sells at $2. It comes complete with its own acetate sheath and the outside is covered in tan leather. Buffer is made in Canada of finest lambswool and handles snap across sheath when it is not in use.

Another item I definitely won't be without is my dandy little plastic penguin clothes brush. Head is detachable and forms handle of the brush. Brush itself forms the penguin's stomach. Stiff bristles make it ideal for cleaning any type of woollens and linen as well as clothing. Price is $2.95.

Garden Party Becomes Indoor Tea

Rain changed the plans of St. Andrew's Presbyterian guild groups for the annual garden party last Saturday afternoon in the grounds at Glenlyon School.

Instead, the affair became an indoor tea party in Kirk Hall. Mrs. W. N. Chant opened the affair and a sum of $1,006.98 was realized.

Guests were received by the president, Mrs. T. Hamilton, and the general convener, Mrs. R. J. Patterson. Master of ceremonies was J. B. Weatherdon.

Program was arranged by J. M. Ferguson and included numbers by the band of Canadian Scottish (Princess Mary's) cadet corps and the Bebe Everfield dancers.

Stalls were in charge of the following: Aprons, Lake Hill, Mrs. F. O. Jenkinson and Mrs. J. Robinson; candy, Royal Oak, Mrs. A. Shold and Mrs. H. Reston; knitting, Beacon Hill, Mrs. Green; superfluities, Fairfield, Mrs. P. B. Allard; miscellaneous, Fernwood, Mrs. J. W. Cameron; home cooking, Oak Bay, Mrs. S. Watt; delicatessen, James Bay, Mrs. E. McCowan.

Chinese foods and novelties were sold by the Chinese Women's Auxiliary; ice cream, pop and books by Canadian Girls in Training. Balloons were sold and parcels checked by the Explorers.

Tea convener was Mrs. G. Hodge with tea hostesses, Mrs. W. Pendray, Mrs. A. Bracks and Mrs. D. Munro. Tea makers and kitchen helpers included Mrs. J. MacPherson, Mrs. S. Kremer and Mrs. J. B. Weatherdon. Ticket sales were handled by Mrs. J. W. Cameron, Mrs. F. Langford and Mrs. Y. Watson.

Fifty Years of Marriage

Mr. and Mrs. George C. Ford, 3011 Scott Street, celebrated a golden wedding anniversary quietly with their family last Friday evening. They were married in First United Church by Rev. John Inkster. They have three daughters, one son, seven grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. Mr. Ford was a street car conductor here until retirement, and Mrs. (Martha) Ford has been well-known in the city as a soloist. In earlier days she appeared in the Capitol and Pantages Theatres. Flowers, gifts, telegrams and long-distance phone calls from Sitka, Alaska, and Halifax were received by the couple on the anniversary. A cake decorated in shades of gold and flanked by golden flowers and candles centred the refreshment table.

Visit London

Victorians continue to visit British Columbia House in London, England. Those who have signed the visitors' book recently include Mr. and Mrs. James G. Hearne, Dr. and Mrs. R. H. J. Monk and their son, Gordon; Mr. P. A. Hole, Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Dabelstein, Miss Laura G. Henderson, Mrs. Gladys Smyth, Mr. and Mrs. W. Ganges.

G. Courtenay, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Potts, Mr. and Mrs. George S. Brown, Miss Ann Bapty, Mr. and Mrs. Peter D. C. Clark, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Hamilton, Major W. Romeril, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Look and their grandson, Christopher; Mrs. W. G. Thorpe, Rev. P. W. Roberts and Mrs. Roberts, Mr. and Mrs. George Chant. Other visitors included Mr. and Mrs. J. Duhig of Ganges.

British Columbia Began Here

By PAT DUFOUR

The small Indian village looked sleepy and neglected. Two sagging totem poles blended their lengths into the muted background of unpainted houses. Only signs to show that the life cycle still touched this remote spot was an exquisite white and blue church and a band of excited children that bounded down to the beach to greet our boat.

Defour

Yet, here at Friendly Cove, perched on the southeastern tip of Nootka Island, was where the white man's conquest of western Canada began.

Essex Young, as he skipped the sturdy Mv. Uchuck III up Nootka Sound, had regaled us with tales of the old days, dating from 1788 when Capt. Cook had made his first landing at this spot and claimed the land for the British.

The five-hour boat trip is part of a tour, started this year by a newly-formed division of Vancouver Island Coach Lines. Leaving from Discovery Inn at Campbell River, tourists will be taken along logging roads through Strathcona Park to Gold River where they embark. Tours are run every Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday.

Although British Columbia knew its first birth pangs in this remote village, there's nothing to set the stamp of the white man upon the place except the small church and a stone cairn on San Rafael Island, erected by the provincial government in memory of that first landing.

Ironically enough, the cairn is placed close to where the Spanish set up their fort, as if to emphasize that, although the Spanish were the first to explore the region, it was the British that had the last word! Uchuck III is the only link that connects the tiny village with the rest of the world. There's no dock so those who wish to board or disembark must use one of the village's "ferries."

Of Personal Interest

Dinner Hostess

Mrs. Alfred Chard is entertaining this evening with a dinner in the Union Club, arranged to honor Reeve Stan Murphy and Mrs. Murphy, who leave shortly with their family for southern Rhodesia to make their home.

Honor Teachers

Mrs. Margaret Nairne and Mrs. Agnes Henning, two teachers who have just retired from Oak Bay Junior High School, were honored at a tea party held in the Oak Bay Beach Hotel. Twenty-one guests attended the no-host party arranged by women of the teaching staff, the stenographic staff and the custodian of the school. Purse were presented by Mrs. C. M. Bicknell to the honor guests. Mrs. D. MacFarland presided at the tea table. Among guests present were Mrs. Rudyard Kipling and Mrs. Colin Glover, wives of the principal and vice-principal of the school.

From Halifax

Mrs. Fran Thomas returned to her home in Halifax, N.S., last Saturday after spending a 10-day visit with her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Prest, in their home on Burleigh Crescent. Mrs. Thomas came west to attend the baptism of the Prests' small son, Robin Lawrence, recently held in St. Paul's Naval and Garrison Church.

These are a motley assemblage, ranging from a respectable roundabout to a huge leaky basket that has to be haled continuously by its crew.

We stopped to allow one of the passengers, Mrs. Ada Williams, go ashore. A born organizer, this elderly woman is the Indian version of an employment agency.

Each berry picking season she heads for Washington and lines up jobs for her people. This year she was back to enlist a 75-man work force.

In the Friendly Cove village of 150, she expected to find the majority of them, gathering others from spots along the Sound.

As we hove to, her "welcoming committee" whooped along the beach and within minutes two grinning boys had set out to take her home.

Soon we were on our way again, passing the old Nootka Cannery that has now fallen into ruins. Much of the roof timbers have rotted away and many of the cabins that once housed workers have been floated to other places along the West Coast.

Close by, we saw Nootka and the weather-beaten church that Emily Carr immortalized in one of her paintings.

Then, we rounded Bligh Island, named after the famous (or infamous?) captain of the Bounty. Lieut. Bligh was sailing master for Capt. Cook on the 1778 expedition.

Essex Young headed the boat closer to shore to let us see the eagle signs Indians once painted on the rocks. The Nootkas and their neighbors were always feuding and these signs marked a stretch of water where all called a truce and respected a temporary peace in order to go fishing!

Every stretch of the five-hour boat trip was rich with history.

New York Designers Put Women in Pants

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Arnold Scaasi fashion show on Monday began with two models showing brocade trousers with mink cuffing the hems of the culotte-cut legs.

Scaasi was doing what comes naturally — to designers these days in the New York garment industry — putting women in pants for formal or informal occasions at home, for walking, shopping, travelling.

The Scaasi pyjamas were in either pale pink or pale green embroidered brocade with fitted, sleeveless and collarless tops. These were just some of the pants or else preps advanced by pace-setting designers who this week are showing their fall and winter collections to visiting reporters.

The current week of shows is Vows in Cornell University Chapel

A wedding of interest to Victorians took place in the Sage Chapel at Cornell University, Ithaca, N.Y., in mid-June when Rev. Warren E. Traub heard vows exchanged between Meredith Savale, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Fleming Savale, Sr., 250 Douglas Street, and Juergen Max Schroeder, son of Mr. and Mrs. Rudi M. Schroeder of Ohio.

Seven-branched candelabra at the altar and gold standards of white and pink peonies decorated the chapel. Miss Miriam E. Lloyd was soloist.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an Empire-line gown of ivory peau de soie with redingote of silk organza. Sprays of flowers embroidered in Alencon lace and seed pearls highlighted bodice and skirt of the redingote, and the chapel train which swept from softly gathered back. A full length circular veil of silk illusion was held by a crown of stephanotis and gypsophila. A single strand of pearls, gift of the groom, was the only jewelry.

Her bouquet was of Phalaenopsis orchids, stephanotis and gypsophila. Matron of honor, Mrs. William Moore, Winnipeg, sister of the bride, chose a full-length deep gold silk organza Empire-line gown and carried sunset colored roses and English ivy. Pale green gowns of, similar style, accented by emerald green velvet ribbons at the waist, were worn by bridesmaids, Miss Miriam T. Lloyd, Washington, D.C.; Miss Joan Spencer, Toronto, and Miss Katherine Detweiler, Ithaca, N.Y. They carried golden garnet roses and ivy. All three attendants wore head chaplets of English ivy.

Brother of the groom, Detrich Schroeder, was best man. William Fleming Savale, twin brother of the bride, Ruediger S. Schroeder, brother of the groom, and David H. Smith, New Jersey, ushered guests to their pews.

The groom's father proposed the toast at a reception in the Anabel Taylor Hall Courtyard, Cornell, overlooking the Cayuga valley. Cake was topped with white roses and gypsophila. Smilax garlands, Pinocchio pom poms and white marguerites decorated guest tables.

Following a brief wedding trip in the East, couple are now living in New York. They expect to visit Victoria in August.

sponsored by the American Designer series. The week following the Fourth of July holiday, the New York Couture, another designer group, will take over for seven days of fashions for visitors.

The Scaasi show featured four major silhouettes for fall, other than those pyjamas. They were: The coat dress, a classic doing big business with every designer this fall; the princess; the tunic, and the fitted with waistline elongated until it seemed to start at the upper hipbone.

Scaasi kept hemlines a conservative mid-knee length—conservative, that is, when you consider that some designers show them two and three inches above the knee for fall.

The Oleg Cassini collection also shown yesterday hiked the hemline to above the knee. Cassini accented the exposure in costumes and suits with swirling skirts, via box pleats. The Christian Dior-New York collection yesterday gave impetus to shorter skirts also. The firm's designer, Gaston Berthelot, took the hemline above the knees and showed legs encased in mesh stockings. For cocktails or dinner, he produced a new mid-calf length in some ensembles.

WE'RE AFLOAT ON GLUEY OCEAN

PASADENA, Calif. (AP)—Direct evidence that the earth's crust floats on an "ocean" of half-melted rock—a gummy layer that blacks out nuclear blast detection in a shadow zone hundreds of miles wide—was reported Saturday by an earthquake expert.

Geophysicist Don L. Anderson, of the California Institute of Technology, said the 300-mile-thick layer—"like soft, hot glass in consistency"—seems to extend entirely around the earth.

Dr. Anderson said in a report released by the Institute. Proof of the existence of the layer was developed from a two-year study of shock waves from the 1960 Chilean earthquake, so powerful it made the whole earth ring like a bell.

Some of the vibrations generated by quakes and nuclear blasts travel along the earth's crust. These are called surface waves. Others, called body waves, radiate through the earth and some of these are reflected upward by its various layers.

RECORD WAVES

Delicately balanced pendulums called seismometers record these waves and help locate the point of origin. Scientists have noticed, however, that there is a mysterious shadow zone around blasts and quakes in which detection is difficult if not impossible. This circular zone starts about 400 miles out from ground zero and runs out to about 1,200 miles. Anderson's studies indicate that waves recorded out to 400 miles are reflected by layers above the newly discovered region, which begins about 60 miles down. Waves recorded beyond the shadow zone apparently are bounced off layers below the 300-mile-thick viscous region.

LITTLE DETECTION

There is little or no detection in the 400 to 1,200-mile shadow zone, however, because the viscous layer is too soft to reflect waves upward. Existence of the layer was predicted by the late Dr. Beno Gutenberg, one-time director of Caltech Seismological Laboratory, because earthquakes waves did not move as rapidly through it as through regions above and below it. Anderson's study proved it to be scientific satisfaction. Why does such a layer exist? Anderson explained that both temperature and pressure increase with depth in the earth. The higher the pressure, the greater the temperature required to melt a given kind of rock. He believes it likely that in the viscous layer temperatures are high.

TODAY'S BEST LAUGH

Television has been so dull this summer that even the news shows are reruns. WISH I'D SAID THAT: Inflation is certainly here, claims Fred Trump. People who used to ask to borrow $500 from him are now asking for $1,500. REMEMBERED QUOTE: "Paper napkins never return from a laundry, nor love from a trip to the law courts."—John Barrymore.

EARL'S PEARLS: "I'm in favor of the war against poverty," writes Arnold Glasow, "—but I'm running out of ammunition." Mitzi Gaynor, appearing in Washington, got the biggest laugh of the evening when she introduced "Barry Goldwater's theme song 'Call Me Irresponsible'."

That's earl, brother.

PET POINTS

By Dr. J. R. Enns

Are Raw Eggs Good For Dogs?

No. The yolk is all right, but the raw white of egg prevents absorption of essential vitamins in the intestines and their beneficial effect is lost.

CLINIC: Q. Twinkle, my pet bird, has had diarrhea for about a month. How do I get rid of it? Twinkle is four years old. I boil his water, keep his cage clean and don't give him greens, but these haven't helped.

D.D., Throop, Pa.

A. If Twinkle has a diarrhea, give him two drops of Kaopectate daily, orally. However, if his droppings are gray and gummy, the condition could be nephritis. To keep him healthy, you should give him two drops daily of a pediatric vitamin, obtainable at your drugstore. Also keep him out of drafts.

CLINIC: Q. I'm having poor luck with goldfish. I buy a batch, follow all directions, but then, all at once, they all die the same night. What am I doing wrong?

P.K.F., Jr., Larchmont, N.Y.

A. Your water could be the cause of your trouble. It may be too acid or too alkaline, or contain too many minerals. Try distilled water.

CLINIC: Q. Is it possible to use a regular rectal thermometer to check a dog for possible fever and infection?

B.B.S., Jr., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

A. Yes—but when you do, don't forget that humans and dogs have different "normals" for temperature. A reading of 101 is normal for a dog. Your normal temperature, of course, is 98.6.

CLINIC: Q. My hamster constantly chews at his cage all night, then he sleeps all day. Could it be that he is bored or that he doesn't get enough exercise?

Miss V.L.F., Moline, Ill.

A. This is typical of older hamsters. Reduce his food portions and play with him more often to give him more exercise. These should bring him around.

CLINIC: Q. Our toy-cocker spaniel has been breaking out with scabs and itchy spots. She's almost four years old. What causes this breaking out?

Miss P.W., Rosalia, Wash.

A. Skin problems are caused by so many things—diet, hormonal imbalance, infections, infestations of lice, fleas, and ticks, and fungi. Bathe your dog with a mild soap and warm water. If the condition persists, consult your veterinarian.

HE GIVES AWAY GRAND PRIZES

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy. Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions to select to answer will receive worthwhile prizes.

The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and the second question a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and the second question a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia.

Andy sends a complete, 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Rexena Guthrie, age 8, of Asheville, N.C., for her question:

How did the butterfly get its name?

Dozens of different butterfly flies flit through our parks and gardens and still more flutter among the wild flowers and along the waysides. Each kind wears pretty party-dress colors, and no one could say which one is the loveliest of them all. There are more butterflies in the Old World. In the countries where our ancestors lived before they crossed the stormy Atlantic to settle in America.

If we cannot pick the prettiest of our butterflies, we can pick out a few that are more plentiful than the rest. We have all seen the white cabbage butterfly, because lots of these white-winged fellows flutter around our gardens, fields and roadsides. They are so common that we might decide most butterflies are white.

Once a Caterpillar

The yellow butterfly was named long, long ago with two Old English words that meant butter and fly. Then the same word was used to name his many pretty cousins, even though their party dresses were of different colors. Experts say that the yellow butterfly of the Old World is a first cousin of our big beautiful sulphur butterfly. Our fellow is a big beauty with yellow wings of pale primrose, deep lemon or golden orange bordered with ribbons of black. On each front wing there is a small black spot.

Our velvety yellow sulphur butterfly was once a wormy green caterpillar which fed on tender round leaves of green clover. And clover spreads over the fields of many lands around the world. His cousin, who was named the butterfly, is quite at home and finds plenty to eat in the Old World.

'Don't Do Damn Thing'

ABILITY TO RELAX SECRET OF CARY GRANT'S SUCCESS

By JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (AP)—Actors, as a group, are the world's biggest worriers. And a lot of them worry about Cary Grant.

One star, about the same age as Cary, recently complained: "How does he do it? He's handsomer than when he was Mae West's leading man. I think he's lying about his age. He won't be 60 for ten years."

But Cary is 60. Studio laborers, even his ex-wives, rave about him. One grip—movie name for laborer—summed it up:

"He's the only actor I know who uses 'dinks' more than he does the pronoun 'I'."

As to his secret of youthfulness, it's so simple that it's anticlimactic.

"I really don't do a damn thing," says Cary. "I relax and take things easy. I'm enthusiastic about my work—and the people I work with."

"It took a lot of years for me to reach my present state of relaxation. I had lots of problems over the years but mostly they were Archibald Leach's problems, not Cary Grant's."

Leach is his real name. "You might say that Archie Leach sat in a movie one day and said: 'Why don't I relax like Cary Grant?' and I did."

Called The Best

Many fine actors, including Sir Laurence Olivier, have called Cary the finest actor in the movies. He has never won an academy award.

Furthermore, he never expects to.

"I'll have to blacken my teeth first," he quips. And he's right. In his current movie, Father Goose, he plays an unshaven beachcomber opposite Leslie Caron.

Says his French co-star: "Cary wears a sloppy shirt and pants costing $3; he has a five-day beard. And you know what he looks like? A suave, sophisticated bum."

Cary is the screen's master of light comedy—a form of acting that is regarded as the hardest thing to do. Unless, you're Cary Grant.

Performance Smooth

When the finished product hits the screen, Cary's performance is so effortless that he can only be compared with Willie Mays catching a tough fly ball in centre field.

But there's a lot of hard work before the cameras turn.

"Actually, the acting is the easiest part of my job," says Cary.

He's at his office every day at Universal City going over the script with writers and directors. He tells neither what to do but they listen attentively when he suggests something.

Says Ralph Nelson who is directing Father Goose, just fresh from his triumph in Lilies of the Field:

"When Cary makes a suggestion, he is so damn polite about it that you instinctively listen. Then, as he talks, you find yourself agreeing that his way is really better."

Muffins Expensive

The stories about Cary's closeness with money usually stem from a muffin story. As he tells it:

"I ordered breakfast at the Plaza in New York one morning—coffee and English muffins."

"When the order came, there were three half slices of muffins. I asked the waiter why, since the menu said muffins, I only got a muffin and a half. He didn't know."

"So I called the head waiter. He didn't know, neither did the assistant manager nor the manager."

"Finally, I called Conrad Hilton in Beverly Hills 3,000 miles away. His office said he was in Istanbul. So I called there and Conrad told me that a hotel survey by some efficiency expert had proved that most customers of Hilton Hotels always left the fourth half of a muffin on their plates. As a plate cleaner-upper, I was appalled to learn this."

"I asked where the other half muffin went. I found out that it was dropped in a box for eggs benedict. I argued with Conrad that the menu then should say muffin and a half, not the plural muffins."

"It cost me several hundred dollars in phone calls but I always get four slices of muffins when I stay at the Plaza."

VIF Expects To Smash All Records

VANCOUVER (CP)—Organizers promise a record audience Wednesday for the extravagant opening night of the 1964 Vancouver International Festival.

The Vancouver Symphony Orchestra, augmented to 100 members, performs Wednesday under French conductor Charles Munch, along with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, who will sing Poulenc's "Le Gloria."

"The first-night audience will dine after the show on a massive buffet of hams, turkeys, B.C. salmon and huge legs of beef."

Thursday night the stars of the Paris Opera Ballet open and next Sunday Marilyn Tyler sings Marguerite in a production of Berlioz' concert opera The Damnation of Faust.

U.S. Rocket Failure

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI)—America's Atlas-Centaur moon rocket failed to achieve an orbit today in a critical test for its role next year in the nation's first unmanned lunar landing mission. The booster's experimental Centaur upper stage, plagued with problems for more than three years, shut down two minutes early and failed to reach the speed necessary for orbit.

No CBC Resignations Over Pearson Film

OTTAWA (CP)—The CBC says that no personnel have tendered resignations over the handling of the film Mr. Pearson.

State Secretary Lamontagne gave this information today to Erik Nielsen (PC-Yukon) who referred to the film "Tasoco."

Mr. Lamontagne said in response to an earlier question by Douglas Fisher (NDP-Port Arthur) that he asked the CBC about its refusal to sell the film for $30,000 as offered by private television interests.

Mr. Lamontagne said he was told that the CBC felt it would be a contradiction of its decision not to show the $35,000 film on grounds it is not up to CBC standards.

COUNCIL BRIEFS

Flower Sale Plan Starts to Droop

Victoria council, which asked the South Vancouver Island Florists and Growers Association to operate a cut-flower stall on the Causeway, showed a mixed reaction Monday to the association's counter-proposal.

The group suggested a tastefully designed stall, costing about $400, should be set up on the southwest corner of Yates and Douglas instead and it should be provided by the city.

The proposal was sent to committee for study after Mayor R. B. Wilson pointed out the idea sprang from council as a tourist attraction and it might be worth considering that the city own the stall so it could control its operation.

However, both Ald. Geoffrey Edgelow and Ald. M. H. Mooney said they had serious misgivings about allowing a retail operation on city streets. Ald. Edgelow added he felt the association should buy some property and establish its own stall.

"After all, we just turned down the little Italian ice cream man on these grounds when he proposed something similar which would have delighted the little kiddies as much as this stall would delight the adults," pointed out Ald. Edgelow.

WEDMAN funeral Thursday

Homesteader Of Leduc Dies Here

A homesteader from the Leduc area in Alberta died here Saturday after a lengthy illness.

William Wedman of 600 Moss Street was one of 23 children born to Gottlieb Wedman, who emigrated to the Leduc area from Russia in 1892.

Mr. Wedman, born in 1894, homesteaded in the area and continued to farm there until 1958 when he retired to Victoria. He had always been an active Lutheran and funeral services will be held at Grace Lutheran Church Thursday at 3:30 p.m. Rev. William A. Williams will officiate and burial will follow at Hatley Memorial Gardens. Hayward's Funeral Co. Ltd. is in charge of funeral arrangements.

Mr. Wedman is survived by the widow, Elsie, 13 children and 14 grandchildren.

Children are Mrs. Oscar (Helen) Witt and Mrs. Wilbert (Martha) Behr of Wisconsin; Mrs. Jack (Mildred) Crapelle, Ottawa; Martin, Harold and Mrs. Peter (Rose) Evanechko of Leduc; Mrs. Sam (Eleanor) Bochte, Edmonton; Mrs. Jim (Florence) Evans, Oakland, Calif.; Mrs. Paul (Therese) Medley, San Bernardino, Calif.; Mrs. Hans (Doris) Intscher, Grande Prairie, Alta.; and Douglas, Carolyn and Linda of Victoria.

Mayor Wilson told council that the existing "no stopping" signs in tow-away zones are being completely redesigned so they are more noticeable and provide adequate warning for local motorists and visitors.

He added that "no tourist has been towed away for at least two weeks," in commenting on a letter criticizing the city for removing tourist cars that blocked rush hour traffic lanes.

Aldermen endorsed a brief by the Marine Workers' and Boatmakers' Industrial Union urging the federal government to take steps aimed at creating a Canadian merchant marine.

An Island Tug and Barge application to sub-lease some industrial reserve holdings in Lime Bay to a firm planning to establish a saw mill was welcomed but sent to committee for study.

Council agreed that although the mill could not build any beehive burner under a new bylaw, the project should be checked to make sure it would not violate the smoke regulation bylaw.

Mayor Wilson was authorized to represent council at a Friday meeting in Vancouver where Greater Victoria and Greater Vancouver municipalities hope to establish a common position on the current B.C. Hydro transit crisis. It involves both expiry of the franchises and a request for higher fares.

Final reading was given to a bylaw authorizing expropriation of an 80-foot strip extending Finlayson from Douglas to Burnside if voluntary agreement is not reached.

Ald. M. H. Mooney was given permission, after he withdrew from council chamber, to sub-lease a 21-year lease he holds on Skinner for a $250,000 apartment project involving 35 two-storey dwellings designed as Swiss-type chalets.

Previous plans to lease the property to an auto wrecking firm brought a storm of protest and a petition by 600 residents in Victoria West.

Aldermen wound up the meeting with an annual joke—declaring a summer recess for July and August.

Ostensibly, this means there will be no regular twice-monthly meetings during this period.

But in the past few years "special" meetings called during the recess have occurred at a higher rate than two a month and this year, what with the transit situation, capital budget and semi-metro negotiations, they probably will be even more frequent.

Instant Diabetes Test

TORONTO (CP)—The International Diabetes Federation announced here Sunday that a new "instant" blood testing process for the detection of diabetes has been developed.

The federation said in a statement preliminary reports on the process indicate it is so "reliable and simple" that national diabetes detection programs now become a possibility.

The statement said a report on a diabetes survey in Britain has led medical men to believe that the world's diabetic population may be about 200,000,000, more than three times higher than present estimates.

One of the conclusions emerging from the British survey was that urine tests in mass surveying are unreliable and the only way of detecting "hidden" diabetes is by blood tests to determine the sugar content in the system.

The new process, to be known by the trade name of Dextrosix, was developed by the A. E. Ames Company of Elkhart, Ind., the statement said. It has been undergoing rigid clinical tests in Canada and the United States for the last six months. The test requires only one minute to administer.

CANADIAN PLAYERS

Playhouse Pays Off Before It's Finished

MacPherson Playhouse is paying theatrical dividends even before its renovation is completed.

The nation's leading road company plans to extend its annual one-night stand here to three days this year on the strength of the playhouse's promise, it was learned today.

After looking over the development, "I decided that Victoria is well on its way to becoming one of the most important theatre cities in North America," T. B. Hendry, administrator of the Canadian Players Foundation has written various persons here.

NEW PLAY

"For this reason, in scheduling our tour of Canada with the new play 'All About Us,' I propose to visit Victoria for three nights."

The show will be presented

Stipe Installed As Rotary Head

DUNCAN—Wally Stipe was installed as president of Duncan Rotary Club during the weekend. The installation was made by Dr. Jack Cruise, past Rotary district governor from Victoria who also installed the following officers: Art Jones, vice-president; Bert Dodd, secretary; Neil Gray, treasurer; and Andy Bennett, Wade Gunn, Phil Lemare and Pat O'Brien, directors.

ATKINS ROAD

New School Principal Awaits

Philip A. Lindgren, 30, is a principal without a school.

Just-named principal of an unnamed, un-built elementary school in District 62, Mr. Lindgren was vice-principal of Langford Elementary School. He will stay there until his new school is built, probably next winter.

The new school is planned as part of a three-year school construction-expansion referendum to be put to ratepayers in Sooke school district in October.

It will be located at Atkins and Goldstream, which has been cleared in readiness.

OVERFLOW

Tentatively called the Atkins Road School, the new project will have three rooms and take overflow shift classes from Langford Elementary.

Mr. Lindgren will be principal of these classes from the time they are organized this fall in Langford school, although that school's regular principal will remain in overall charge of the school.

It is hoped by school trustees that because of the nearness of the new site to E and N Railway tracks, a pedestrian overpass may be built.

It's Hydroponic... and It Pays Off

RICHTER
... back from Orient

Ice Breaker's Sailing Halted

QUEBEC (CP) — The departure of the Arctic supply vessel Simon Fraser, which had been scheduled for today, has been delayed a few days while the Canadian Coast Guard ship undergoes a minor overhaul.

A definite new departure date was not announced.

A total of 18 ships of the Canadian Coast Guard are being made ready for the department of transport's 1964 Arctic supply operations, which will get under way early in July.

Until late October, the ice-breaker fleet will be busy in waters ranging from the southern shores of James Bay to the edge of the permanent polar ice.

They will be escorting government-chartered cargo vessels carrying once-a-year shipments of vital supplies to weather stations and defence outposts.

When the cargo-moving work is done, scientific groups from government departments concerned with Arctic research will be busy with hydrographic, oceanographic and related studies, using the ships as their bases of operation.

When the season has ended, an estimated 100,000 tons of supplies of all types will have been handled by the fleet and the freighters it shepherds northward. In addition, its ice-breakers will have provided escort to transatlantic commercial ships carrying cargo between Churchill, Man., and European ports through Hudson Bay and Hudson Strait.

Hydroponic agriculture may have a place on Saanich Peninsula, Agriculture Minister Frank Richter indicated on his return from the Orient.

Back in his office Monday after a 23-day trade mission of 15 government and official representatives, Mr. Richter said the Japanese method of using water-borne fertilizers in greenhouse culture may be introduced here.

Both the Lower Island and Fraser Valley areas have substantial hothouse development for small vegetable and flower production.

Hydroponic farming in Japan, Mr. Richter said, greatly speeded up growth of cucumbers, string beans, pineapples and potatoes.

It also enables the farmer, the minister said, to gear his production to high price markets.

Introduction of the hydroponic methods—using water to supply chemical nutrients to plants—could "substantially increase" production in existing greenhouses through the province, he said.

But it would take some time to assess all the information gathered on the Japanese trip and decide what can be adapted to B.C. use.

AUTOMATED

Plastic tubing to carry the chemical-laden water supply is laid in trenches filled with gravel. The supply of water is controlled by highly automated methods to offset the serious shortage of farm labor in Japan, the minister said.

Mr. Richter found the Japanese were interested in buying more Canadian wheat and certain "specialty items" such as seeds and foundation dairy stock. The minister said he felt "some potential" existed for increased trade in agricultural items in this category.

The minister also found glass is a better cover than plastic, producing as much as 50 per cent bigger crop. Japan is ahead of Canada in technical agriculture, he said.

RCAF HAS ONE-TWO PUNCH

OTTAWA (CP) — Two wings of the RCAF air division in Europe now have nuclear arms, Defence Minister Hellyer said Monday in the Commons.

Replying to Gordon Churchill, former Conservative defence minister, Mr. Hellyer said No. 3 wing at Zweibrücken and No. 4 wing in Baden-Soellingen, both in West Germany, "have been operational for some time."

Mr. Churchill: "Does that mean they are equipped with nuclear arms and that some of the planes are standing on quick action alert?"

Mr. Hellyer: "That is correct."

V.I. Towns Plan Big Day To Mark Canada's Birth

As Canada celebrates Dominion Day Wednesday, there will be no lack of enthusiasm on Vancouver Island.

Here are some of the events organized by the different areas:

SIDNEY: Sidney Day Parade will resort to the route of three years ago, assembling at Queen's and Third at 10:30 a.m., then wending its way to Beacon Avenue.

From there it will go to Fifth Street and police will then marshal it on to Sanacha Hall.

In the parade will be many notable teams, including Victoria Chinatown Club's drum and bell corps, the Loyal Order of the Moose marching teenage team, a clown unit from Victoria Shrine Club, IOOF Robinettes drill team, Treasure Island Sweetheart baton corps and the Royal Canadian Legion Esquimalt pipe band.

CROWNING

At 12:30 p.m. Joan Gardner will be crowned Miss Sidney by retiring queen and Miss P.N.E. Linda Douma. Princesses Ann Jeffrey and Daphne Green will also be crowned.

During the afternoon, starting with the Elks Flag Day Ceremony, there will be a variety of entertainments for all age groups. Michael Williams trained dogs will give a display at 1:30 p.m., followed at 2 p.m.

by a square dancing display by the Junior Swinging Eights.

For music lovers there will be band music 2:30 p.m. to 3 p.m. followed by Fred Usher and his entertainers until 4 p.m.

During the evening, 9 p.m. to 1 a.m., there will be a dance open to all age groups in the Sanacha Hall.

ALBERNI: Mill sports have been added to the loggers events during the second annual Elks celebrations in Sproat Lake Park starting 10 a.m.

Contestants in the log burling, chopping, sawing, jousting, axe-throwing, shingle packing, lumber grading, eye splicing and women's nail driving events, will come from all over the island and the U.S.

CHEMUNUS: A big holiday parade, with 11 bands among the 85 entries, will leave Horse-shoe Bay Inn at 12:30 p.m.

Children's sports will be held in Chemunus ball park in the morning, followed by the choosing of the queen at 2:15 p.m.

There will also be a marching display by sea cadets and a diving display by the Silk Angels sky diving club.

COURTENAY: Starting with a horse show in Centennial Park at 10 a.m., Courtenay will hold a three-part program. There will be a gymkhana in the Square at noon, followed by an appearance in Lewis Park at 5 p.m. of B.C. Lions who begin their 10-day training camp.

DUNCAN: Cowichan district riding club will begin its annual Dominion Day horse show on the exhibition grounds at 10:30 a.m.

TOFINO: Children's and adult sports will be held throughout the day.

Ivan Had Rich Tastes

MOSCOW (AP) — Ivan Schibyr was just an ordinary shop manager but he had expensive tastes. He had a new Volga auto, a house of his own and gave champagne and vodka parties.

How did he do it on a salary of only 90 rubles ($100) a month?

According to the newspaper Trud (labor), he was one of five ringleaders of a massive embezzlement racket that netted 6,000,000 rubles.

Trud says the ring did its work in the Ukrainian mining town of Donetsk.

Trud does not say exactly how the four made all their money, but the method could have followed the pattern of other such cases. One way is to sell short weight, another to sell low-quality goods at first-quality prices and pocket the difference, to rig the books, or to take bribes from persons waiting for scarce goods.

Trud says the five were able to build fine new houses, while their law-abiding comrades live in apartment blocks. Trucks would arrive at these houses loaded with such items as crystal, expensive chinaware, thick carpets and modern furniture.

Rites on Thursday

The death Saturday of Mary Constance Babington, 710 Fort, marked the end of a chapter of early Victoria history.

Mrs. Babington was the last surviving child of the first white child born at Fort Victoria.

Daughter of the Hon. Alec Davie, QC, one-time MP for Lil-loet, and the former Constance Langford Skinner, the first white child born here, Mrs. Babington is survived by six nephews, including provincial Conservative leader and former federal works minister Davie Fulton. Mrs. Babington was born in Victoria in 1890. She graduated from the Royal Jubilee Hospital school of nursing in 1907 and practised nursing at Prince Rupert, Powell River, Tofino, Duncan, Kamloops and Victoria, retiring two years ago at the age of 78.

Prayers will be held at Hayward's Funeral Chapel 7 p.m. Wednesday. Requiem Mass will be celebrated in St. Andrew's Cathedral at 10 a.m. Thursday.

Film Hamlet To Get Brief Theatre Play

NEW YORK (AP) — Broadway's Hamlet, starring Richard Burton, is being made into a movie that 1,000 theatres will be allowed to show just four times.

The unusual project was announced Monday as a joint undertaking of three companies. The strict limitation on number of performances was stipulated by Burton and Alexander H. Cohen, producer of the stage production which opened its tryout run in Toronto.

Pointing out the experimental nature of the undertaking, the actor said he and his fellow-performers reserved the right to look the film over after passage declared. "I think there will be of at least three years."

"Acting styles change," he said, "a big bonfire in Times Square at some future time if we don't like what we see then."

Three performances of Hamlet are being filmed at the Lunt-Fontanne Theatre before regular audiences, starting tonight.

The process, called Theatrofilm, uses regular stage lighting only and is designed not to interfere with spectator enjoyment.

USE FIVE CAMERAS

Five cameras are used, and filming of the drama three times enables the crews to shoot from 15 positions. The final screen version will be edited for best shots, but without any cutting of the 3½-hour performance time.

Participating in the project are American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres, which is underwriting the $350,000 cost; Warner Brothers, handling distribution; and Electronvision, which owns the film process.

Leonard H. Goldenson, president of American Broadcasting, said the picture will be screened simultaneously throughout the United States and Canada for two matinee and two evening performances in late September. The Broadway run ends Aug. 8.

Goldenson said a potential audience of 5,000,000 would see the movie, at an average expected admission price of $2.

Appearing with Burton in Hamlet are Canadian-born Hume Cronyn, Alfred Drake and Eileen Herlie.

CRADLING her four-day-old daughter, not yet named, Suzie, a 17-year-old chimpanzee at the Greater Los Angeles Zoo, tells off visitors outside her quarters. If the buses are well used then the service will be continued after the trial period is over.

In addition there will be an early morning bus for school children.

Train Hits Car, 3 Die

HUMBOLDT, Sask. (CP) — A CNR freight train plowed into a car at an unprotected level crossing near Humboldt Monday night, killing three persons and seriously injuring six others. Dead are Mrs. Clara Koob, 33, of Meacham, Sask., her two-year-old daughter Marina, and a niece, Frances Hofmann, 19, of Meunster, Sask.

When people think of phoning you, are you only half there?

People looking up a number in a telephone directory are usually in a hurry.

If they can't find your name quickly and easily, they sometimes have an unfortunate habit of calling one of your competitors. That's why additional listings pay for themselves many times over.

If you're an accountant or an hotelkeeper, a lawyer or a veterinary surgeon, an architect or a taxi operator, you are only one of the thousands of different business and professional people who can benefit by listing themselves under more than one heading.

The same applies if your name is difficult to remember accurately. A company called Johnson & Jackson, for example, would be wise to take out an additional listing under "Jackson & Johnson".

There are many other cases in which an additional listing or listings can help ensure that you get the fullest possible share of business. The cost of these valuable safeguards? About 2½ cents per day. At this price you really can't afford to be only half there!

Call our Marketing and Sales Department or your local B.C. TEL Business Office this week and discuss with one of our experienced consultants what additional listings you could profitably use. No obligation, of course.

ART AND PSYCHOLOGY

200 Take Part In Uvic Parley

Art and psychology remain aloof in the minds of artists who took part in University of Victoria's first conference on the subject over the weekend.

About 200 persons — from housewives and truckers to painters, poets and psychologists — took part in the day-long discussion of a psychological approach to art.

Moderator Dr. G. A. Milton summarized the discussion as "lively, well received," with a "strong possibility of being repeated" perhaps in a year's time.

He said psychologists taking part believed this area of science wants to understand art, "while artists maintain a wholistic, uninterpretable stand."

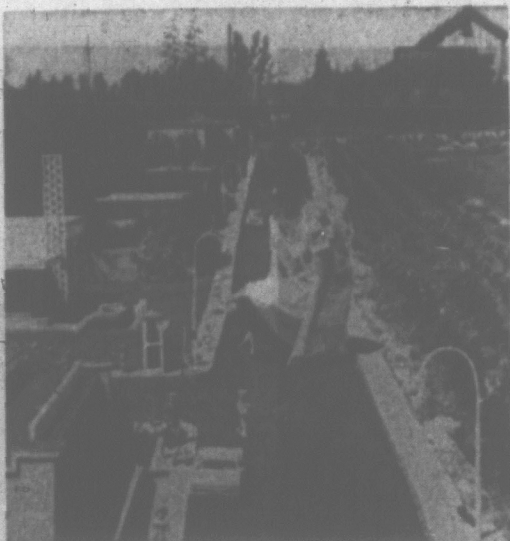

The conference was set up to hear selected speakers representing the university and the community from artistic and psychological points of view, and was open to the public at a nominal fee.

There were a number of amateur artists as well as persons from a variety of occupations.

Psychologists had the first word, in effect: The artistic experience is a balance between what is completely predictable and that which is completely unpredictable, or unpatterned.

The individual, then, will require more or less "pattern" in order to have an artistic experience.

The artists seemed to agree that art can't be analyzed, and were supported by philosopher Dr. John DeLucca, who said art is different from psychology and science, and can't be treated scientifically.

PERT GIANT Mary Anne Braund, 12, finds Land of the Little People more interesting than her home town of Seattle.

The Land That Two Giants Built

By JIM BIGSBY
It looked like any intersection.

A sailor was crossing the wide asphalt street, a gas station and phone booth stood on one corner, a policeman watched the traffic flow.

Suddenly a 60-foot giant stepped over a field and onto the street.

"Look, mommy, there's even a telephone booth," said 12-year-old Mary Anne Braund of Seattle as she reached down to the red and white kiosk.

Mary Anne was a visitor not just to Canada, but to the Land Of The Little People, one acre of miniature countryside located on Mount Newton Cross Road in Central Saanich.

Built on the scale of one inch to the foot, the little countryside and village seem to have everything.

There's even a tiny kitchen sink visible through the window of one of the little houses.

A waterfall tumbles down a mountain setting complete with cable car, flattens into a stream and winds across the meadows.

A few hundred tiny feet along, it turns the wheel of a stone-built mill. Then it curls past a campsite and tumbles into a lake, one of four on the property.

Electric Train

Across a suspension bridge spanning the lake hums an electric train: its flatcars carrying timbers from a nearby lumber mill.

The train heads through the many tall trees (a giant would call them shrubs) of the countryside) and runs parallel to the main street of town.

The windows of shops in the village and the nearby shopping centre are decorated with merchandise. Even the motel restaurant has linen and lamps on its tables.

Many more buildings—80 in all—stand in the countryside.

And the little people are progressing—a ferry slip stands ready for a Gulf Islands style vessel presently under construction.

The inhabitants are not that small that they object to recognizing two languages. The passport—yes, a passport—issued by their Department of External Affairs is printed in both French and English. It guarantees free re-entry for its holder during the rest of 1964.

Owned By Giant

The help comes from Tom Karr, a giant who owns the land the little people live on. He and another giant built everything, from house to bridge to train.

Mr. Karr saw his first miniature landscapes in Europe and decided to establish a Canadian colony for the wee folks.

The little people's immigration office is open from 10 a.m. to dusk seven days a week for any giants who wish to visit.

And visitors should take heed of one departing giant's words: "Next time I'm going to bring my camera."

DUNCAN COUNCIL BRIEFS

Tar in Water Stays for Now

DUNCAN — Residents here will have to put up with tar particles in the water for the time being, city engineer Russell Potter told council Monday night.

The tar, which is originating in a 14-inch steel main and affecting certain parts of town, cannot be removed without taking out the pipe.

And the pipe cannot be removed until another source of water is available, said Mr. Potter. Then, it will be cleaned and relined.

Council will approach the B.C. department of highways to ask about construction of curbs and gutters on the Trans-Canada Highway through Duncan.

It will ask if the work is to be carried out this year or if the project has been held over another year.

Said Mayor Jack Dobson: "It looks like it has been stalled again."

Council plans to amend a by-law concerning old buildings, enabling it to condemn the structures when necessary.

The present bylaw does not state specific types of deterioration to buildings before they can be condemned.

Impaired Driver

DUNCAN — Louis Patenaude was fined $175 in police court here for impaired driving.

Also fined $200 for driving while suspended was John E. Cotterill, of Duncan.

BOY SCOUTS WALK OUT OF WOODS

Two missing Victoria Boy Scouts turned up unhurt 24 hours late from a camping trip to the Jordan Meadows area over the weekend.

Jim Titterle, 2420 Notting-ham, and Richard Kenton, 2761 Dewdney, both 14, left Saturday morning for an overnight hike for their first-class scouting medal.

They were to hike from Leech River to the Bear Creek dam, and expected to get there Sunday afternoon.

They missed a trail and got lost.

The boys camped again a second night, and found their way out Monday afternoon when they met a party of loggers.

Dredging Starts For Third Berth

NANAIMO — Dredging operations began today in preparations for the third berth at the assembly wharf.

Marine Pipeliner No. 114, a suction dredge from New Westminster, fixed a dredge pipeline on Monday. Actual construction is expected to begin in about six weeks but tenders have not yet been called.

New MO Named

COMOX — Squadron Leader Colin Hardie, 32, of Scotland, who joined the RCAF in London, England, in 1959, has been appointed new senior medical officer at RCAF station Comox.

He succeeds Squadron Leader James Garrity, who is taking post-graduate studies in general surgery in Toronto Military hospital.

PLUNGING DOWN out of the darkness, jet fighter smashed into several automobiles before exploding against house seen in right background. Two sleeping children and a dog were killed. (AP Wirephoto.)

SLEEPING CHILDREN DIE

SULLIVAN
...balled out

HAVERHILL, Mass. (UPI)—A pilotless jet fighter plane crashed with the explosive fury of a bomb early today into three homes and a dozen parked cars in a residential area of this industrial city. Two sleeping children were killed.

The pilot, with an agonizing prayer that the area below was uninhabited, ejected himself from the F86 single-seater craft and parachuted to safety. He landed in a tree top.

The plane dropped silently and swiftly in the blackness shortly after midnight and crashed with a thunderous roar on Lackney Street. The street was transferred into a sea of flames.

The plane ricocheted off one house, veered crazily down the street bouncing off parked cars and another house, and plunged nose first into the bedroom of a third house where the children were asleep with their pet dog.

"The kids never had a chance," a policeman said.

Dead are Pamela Gifford, 11, and her brother Todd, 8, children of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Gifford. The dog also was killed.

The parents were hysterical.

They were taken to a hospital for treatment.

The pilot, Capt. Dalbert F. Sullivan of Boston's Back Bay section, said the engine went dead on him after a small explosion.

Before ejecting himself, he said he turned the plane to "a black area," hoping no houses were below.

Sullivan, father of five children, apparently thought he would not survive. He said, "I prayed that my five children would get a good father. I prayed the area was uninhabited."

After landing in the tree, Sullivan climbed down and made his way to the swift-flowing Merrimack River. He inflated his portable raft and floated out on the river until he was rescued.

IN COMPLETE DAZE Joseph Bilotti, who was watching a late show on television, said he heard "an enormous noise, like an atomic bomb, and I saw a mass of flames."

"I saw Earl Gifford (father of the dead children) wandering around in a complete daze. I shouted, 'Watch out for the live wires and flames.' He just groaned."

Matthew Cummings, who lives next door to the Giffords, said his house shook as if struck by lightning.

Bob Kennedy Sees Primate

CZESTOCHOWA, (AP)—Robert F. Kennedy met for more than an hour in a 600-year-old monastery today with Stefan Cardinal Wyszynski, key figure in the tense relations between Poland's Communist government and the Roman Catholic Church.

The U.S. attorney-general met the primate of Poland in the cloister of the monastery which attracts millions of Polish Catholic pilgrims.

Rezoning Sought For James Bay Shopping Centre

Rezoning for eight lots at Simcoe and Croft to provide space for building a local area shopping centre was requested today by Mace Homes and Investments Ltd.

The application at City Hall said a new Safeway store, a bank, restaurant and several small shops would be grouped around a shopping mall on property combined with the present site of a Safeway store.

Mace Investments also is building a 12-storey high-rise apartment block across the street.

Typhoon Hits Philippines, 16 Killed

MANILA (UPD)—Typhoon Winnie smashed across the heavily-populated northern Philippines with 118-mile-an-hour winds today, causing at least 16 deaths and millions of dollars in property damage.

Reports coming in from affected areas were sketchy because communications lines were down in most places, and Manila itself was badly mauled and without electricity long after the storm had passed.

The weather station at the U.S. Clark air force base 60 miles north of Manila said the typhoon was heading for the Red China mainland.

Assistant presidential secretary Raul Gonzales said in a radio interview tonight that 3,000 families were affected in nearby Pasay City. He said a family of five perished there when their flimsy house collapsed.

Other casualties included two persons crushed to death in Manila when building walls fell on them at the height of the storm. Among other casualties were six persons who drowned in southern Palawan province when their boat capsized.

OIL BARGE EXPLOSION KILLS FOUR, 13 MISSING

MORGAN CITY, La. (AP)—An explosion and fire roared through a floating oil-rig in pre-dawn darkness today, plunging the multi-million-dollar apparatus into the depths of the Gulf of Mexico. At least four persons were killed; another 13 persons or more were missing.

Twenty-five survivors were brought to hospital here. Some were burned but a hospital spokesman said all were in satisfactory condition.

The dead were not immediately identified.

Helicopters ferried the survivors to this coastal fishing town about 70 miles west of New Orleans.

The 200-foot long rig—actually a drilling ship—is owned by Reading and Bates of Morgan City. It had moved to the explosion site only Monday.

Half the men on the "C. F. Baker" were asleep when the explosion occurred about 3:30 a.m.

The first survivors to reach here said the on-duty crew hit a shallow high pressure pocket of gas while drilling in the Gulf of Mexico at 640 feet. The gas began seeping up into the rig.

FLOOR BUCKLED
The floor began to buckle and we knew it was time to get off," said one survivor.

Some had got a workboat alongside when sparks on the rig touched off the explosion.

Those on board were trapped momentarily by flames which leaped skyward and covered the rig and surrounding waters. Wind whipped the flames away from one side of the rig and some of the men were able to jump into the water.

"It stood up on its end and down she went," said another survivor, describing how the drilling rig sank in more than 100 feet of water.

A spokesman for Reading and Bates here said the C. F. Baker, built last year, cost his company "about $4,000,000." He said the firm has four other rigs operating in the Gulf.

U.S. Gives More Atomic Secrets To NATO Nations

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Johnson notified Congress today that he has approved a new agreement to extend the types of atomic information the United States may give to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and its member nations.

The new agreement supersedes an earlier one, under which NATO and its members have been receiving some atomic information for the last several years.

In notifying Congress of the new agreement, Johnson said the expanded area of information is needed to make effective use of nuclear delivery systems being provided by the U.S. under bi-lateral procedures and agreements that followed creation of NATO atomic stockpiles in 1957.

Also, Johnson said, the new agreement will permit NATO member countries to share in information that the U.S. has been exchanging only with NATO itself, under a 1955 agreement.

RULE MORE EFFECTIVE
"This will make these countries' role in alliance planning in the nuclear field more effective," Johnson said.

He said the new agreement "represents a logical and useful step in our continuing and varied efforts to ensure wider allied participation into NATO nuclear defenses."

Furthermore, Johnson said, "such wider participation is necessary on both military and political grounds. It is needed to enhance the effectiveness of NATO defenses. On political grounds, it is needed to reinforce NATO cohesion in meeting our allies' legitimate desire to make a constructive contribution to nuclear defense."

Under the Atomic Energy Act, the joint House of Representatives-Senate atomic energy committee must have 30 days' notice before the agreement can go into effect.

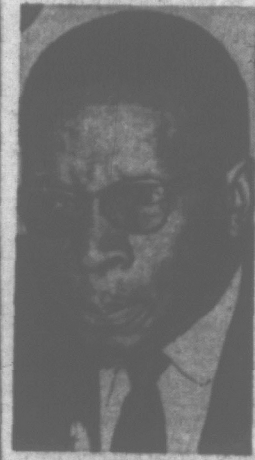

Defence Secretary Robert S. McNamara and Glenn T. Seaborg, chairman of the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission, had recommended that the president approve the broadening agreement.

In a memorandum to Johnson, they stressed that the new agreement makes clear that there will be no transfer of atomic weapons or atomic weapons systems involving restricted data.

Experts said this provision would rule out any information or equipment that would help make any NATO member an independent nuclear power.

Canadians Fly Home

(Times News Services)

LEOPOLDVILLE—The resignation of Prime Minister Cyrille Adoula's government has been accepted, President Joseph Kasavubu announced today.

The mandate of Adoula's cabinet officially expired today, the fourth anniversary of the Congo's independence.

But Kasavubu asked the government to stay in office until a new constitution, now before the country in a two-week referendum, has been approved, as it is expected to be.

There was widespread expectation that the new government would be headed by Moise Tshombe, the secessionist president of Katanga province whose defiance of Adoula's government was ended by the UN Congo force early in 1963.

Tshombe returned from self-imposed exile in Europe last week and embarked on a reconciliation mission to bring together the still turbulent African country's feuding politicians.

UN TROOPS LEAVE

The announcement of Adoula's resignation coincided with the departure of the last UN troops—Canadians and Nigerians—ending the United Nations military operation in the Congo.

An RCAF transport took off with 58 members of a Canadian

OTTAWA (CP)—Some Canadians in the Congo are missing. External Affairs Minister Martin informed the Commons today.

Last man aboard was the UN's last commander, Maj. Gen. J. Aguiy-Tsonli of Nigeria, ending the UN military operation that began only two months after independence from Belgium June 30, 1960, brought anarchy and chaos to the Congo.

The Canadian Signallers were handed poinsettia blooms as they mounted the ramp for the first leg of their long flight to Trenton, Ont. The first stop was Pisa, Italy.

MONEY LACKING

The UN ended its military role in the former Belgian colony today for lack of money. There were no parades or ceremonies to mark the departure of the UN troops.

Those on hand included the civilian chief of the UN Congo operation, Bibiano Osori of Mexico, some 50 members of the diplomatic corps, and friends.

The gradual UN withdrawal started about three months ago. About 50 Pakistani soldiers running an ordnance depot here will stay as part of the UN's civilian operation.

With the military pullout complete, only 400 Nigerian police remain in the Congo—all in Leopoldville and mostly for training purposes—to help Congo.

Copper Project Ready to Roll

British Columbia's largest—and most costly—copper property is expected to be in production within three years.

Granduc Mines Ltd., a subsidiary of Newmont Mining Corp. of New York announced today it has arranged financing for its $55,000,000 copper project about 35 miles northwest of Stewart at the head of the Portland Canal. The property is in rugged, mountainous country at the head of the South Fork and Lillooet Rivers.

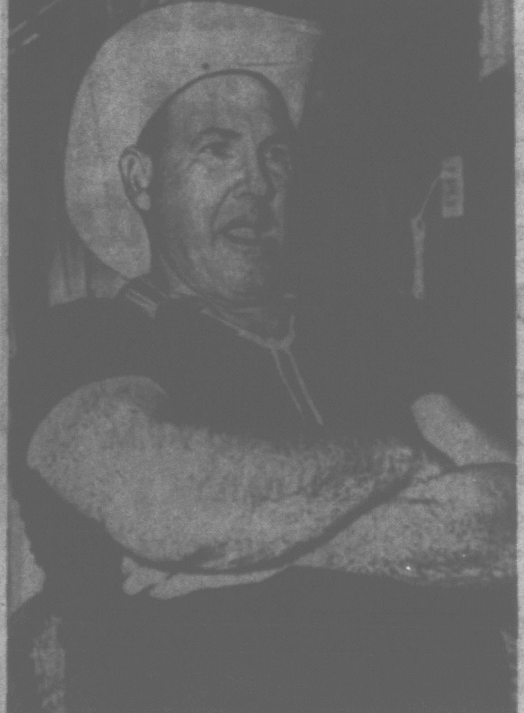

The company plans to drive a 10 to 12-mile tunnel under the Lejac Glacier to connect with road systems to transport its copper concentrates from the mine to tidewater near Stewart.

Granduc estimates that the property contains ore reserves of 32,500 tons grading about 1.35 per cent copper. A mill handling from 7,000 to 8,000 tons of ore daily will produce concentrates at a rate equivalent to 42,500 tons of copper metal annually.

The concentrates are to be shipped to the refinery of the American Smelting and Refining Co. at Tacoma, Wash. American Smelting has agreed to purchase all production for 10 years and has advanced Granduc $10,000,000.

People and Things

(Times News Services)

BAKERSFIELD, Calif. — For 101 hours, the only thing between a helicopter and the ground was fresh air and 48 eggs.

Then, Monday afternoon, the 'copter dropped down to an altitude of three feet, the four cartons of eggs were plucked from its skids, and it set down on hard ground for the first time since Thursday.

National Aeronautics Association referees—who taped the eggs to the skids to make sure the machine made no unauthorized landings—said the 101-hour, five-minute mark will be posted as a helicopter endurance record.

Four pilots took turns manning the 'copter, climbing in and out when it dropped down to a yard above Kern County Airport. The craft was fueled by a siphon device as it hovered there.

When the old mark, 72 hours, set four years ago by U.S. Navy flyers, was cracked Sunday, pilot Gene Goodman dropped an egg to the runway. It was one he had had in his pocket.

GROTON, Conn. — Renato Mendoza, 22, a sailor, nearly drowned when he tried swimming to his submarine as it moved down the Thames to sea.

Police said Mendoza, anxious to avoid an absent-without-leave mark on his record, jumped into the water to intercept the submarine Piper.

He became exhausted a quarter-mile out and shouted for help. A police launch was called out, but he made it to shore by himself.

Police said Mendoza had been on leave in Philadelphia and returned to New London as the Piper pulled out to sea without him.

Mendoza is helping out at the submarine base until the Piper returns in a week.

VANCOUVER — Girls here are buying topsless swimsuits.

Stores have received orders for 72 swimsuits at $35 each, and one leading women's shop has two samples showing in a display window.

The display suits were flown from Europe and have been previewed for local photographers.

Judiciously placed black patches on the straps of the topsless suits seemed to solve—temporarily at least—the problem of over-exposure.

PIKESVILLE, Md. — Actress Gloria de Haven was given a suspended $10 fine Monday for speeding to a Saturday night show for which she was late.

"I just couldn't keep 2,000 people waiting," she told a magistrate.

The 35-year-old actress is playing in The Sound of Music at a summer theatre just outside Baltimore.

A state policeman said he stopped her not far from the theatre. "She was passing everything in sight," he testified.

MONTREAL — A marriage annulment was granted in Superior Court Monday to a Roman Catholic woman on grounds that her Turkish Moslem husband had not been baptized.

Mr. Justice Charles A. Bertrand annulled the childless six-year marriage and ruled that marriages between Catholics and unbaptized persons are void because of a 16th century decree recognized by Quebec's Civil Code.

He ordered the Baptist minister who performed the ceremony to take notice of the annulment. The marriage was executed in a Baptist church because the husband wanted a "neutral" ceremony.

LONDON — Automation is about to hit Britain's legalized betting industry.

Robot bookies nicknamed "Honest Robert" will automatically collect bets and issue receipts at factories. The machines are intended to replace "runners"—men employed by bookmakers to collect bets from their fellow workers.

The home office said today the betting and gaming act permits factory runners and "presumably a runner could be either a man or a machine."

Gosley's Gang Does It Again At Gay Opener

By AUDREY ST. D. JOHNSON

Streamers of colorful flags, bright painted guardrails, and British travel posters set an appropriate mood for the hundreds of Victorians who gathered up at Oak Bay Junior High School Monday night to welcome the 1964 edition of the Smile Show.

Living up to the promise, Jerry Gosley and his "Gang" provided 2½ hours of vigorous entertainment in the tradition of a British seaside variety show.

The 12th annual edition is new in content, with one or two exceptions; it has some notable talent, some good dance numbers, a lot of old jokes offered with the zest of new ones, some up-to-date and topical material.

BELLY LAUGH

Best in the latter category, and in fact the best of Gosley, was the George Vancouver number, which also provided the evening's best belly laugh.

Appearing atop a light-trimmed dome in the familiar posture of the figure that crowns our Legislative Buildings, Jerry in a rhymed patter song complained of the seabirds that "made him a limey," high-risers that shut off his view of "sons of the beach," and "flying Phil."

Single greatest asset of the show is undoubtedly the professional skill and fine imagination of Allan Edwards who was responsible for some breath-catching set designs as well as the effective color co-ordinations and costumes.

NEEDS POLISHING

The opening ensemble, No-where Else to Go, which echoes title and theme of Gosley's just-published biography, is seriously in need of the polishing that will probably come with repetition.

A threesome consisting of Gordon Jolley, Howard Webb and Ron Korhonen did an amusing number on the amalgamation of the armed forces, and the shortest pantomime on record—The Three Bears—had a very funny punch line.

WARM CHARM

One familiar figure and one new one added something of value. The warm charm of personality and haunting voice of Irene Henderson was present in several numbers; who could visualize the Smile Show without her?

And in Bettie Ellis, Gosley has found a boisterous comedienne whose buffoonery, though corny as Kansas, is fairly irresistible.

BRIGHT LIGHT

Attractive dancer Sylvia Mobey had a contest with Jim Peaker's drums in a well devised number. Miss Mobey is a dancer of versatile talents and a bright light of the show.

Ron Korhonen again proved a brilliant man with an accordion, and a newcomer, Herbert Reinste, revealed a good voice in a pleasing ballad style.

RESPONSIBLE

Responsible in large measure for successful aspects are choreographer Bebe Eversfield who provided a refreshing variation on I Could Have Danced All Night among other goodies, organist Ken Peaker and musical arranger Chet Lamberton.

Smile Show will run tonight through to Aug. 22.

Combined Choir At Royal Tonight

Combined choir of the Radcliffe Choral Society and the Harvard Glee Club will appear on stage at the Royal Theatre tonight at 8:30 for one performance.

Sponsored by the Victoria Celebrations Committee, the 90-voice group is under the direction of Prof. Elliott Forbes.

Their next engagement is at the Vancouver International Festival.

FISHING DOUBLED

Lake Ontario produced 210,000 pounds of commercial fish in the first three months of 1964, compared with 106,000 in the same period of 1962.

Announce New Healing Substance...

Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids... and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissue.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved... actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

Among these case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief even occurred in cases of long standing, and most important of all, results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dye) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dye is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a principal cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Satisfaction guaranteed or your money refunded.

'U.S. Will Retain Historic Rights'

OTTAWA (CP)—External Affairs Minister Martin told the Commons fisheries committee today that historic United States fishing rights will be honored when Canada extends its offshore territorial limit to 12 miles.

He was replying to questions by Tom Barnett (NDP—Cornwall, Ontario), who said many fishing rights were given to the U.S. by the British on Canada's behalf in the 19th century before Canadian governments were making their own decisions.

Mr. Barnett said preservation of these rights is absurd and Canada should ask the U.S. to forgo them. This would indicate to the U.S. that it was dealing with a truly sovereign nation.

Mr. Martin said it would be asking too much of the U.S. to ask it to drop these historic rights. Extension of the offshore limits to 12 miles was a big enough request in itself.

"We have already clearly shown we propose to honor historic U.S. fishing rights whether or not they are seriously used," Mr. Martin said. "We believe this is in the national interest."

COULD CAUSE CONCERN

"If we were to take unreasonable steps, there would be concern among other nations about our actions."

Angus MacLean (PC—Quebec), former fisheries minister, suggested the bill providing for the new 12-mile limit should contain a reassurance for other countries which might fear the broad scope of the act, that Canada is not contemplating further arbitrary extensions.

"It is not necessary for us to say in the bill that international law and procedure will be followed," Mr. Martin said. "It is well understood by other countries that any Canadian government will act legally in such matters. We do not intend to make outlandish claims."

Turkish Warning Of Invasion

LONDON (AP)—Turkey has threatened anew to invade Cyprus unless Greece accepts United Nations proposals for negotiations to settle the strife between the Greek- and Turkish-Cypriots.

Turkish Premier Ismet Inonu told the British government Monday that UN mediator Sakari Tuomioja of Finland may have only one more chance to settle the dispute by peaceful means.

Inonu told a press conference that Turkey considers it still has the right to intervene militarily in Cyprus despite the presence of the UN peace force on the Mediterranean island.

Inonu said the next few days would show if Greece is prepared to accept diplomatic proposals to negotiate the issue.

Turkish diplomats said Tuomioja is expected to propose that he make a fresh attempt to reach a settlement in separate negotiations with the Greek and Turkish governments.

"If these negotiations should fail, we do not see how we could escape the absolute necessity of exercising our treaty right to intervene in the island," a high Turkish source said.

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States has told the United Nations, Greece and Turkey it is ready to send an outstanding figure to the civil-war-torn island of Cyprus to help the UN in its peacemaking efforts.

golese authorities keep order. With the resignation of the Adoula government, Moise Tshombe's reconciliation mission went ahead in high gear.

'WILL BE FREED'

Tshombe, the former president of Katanga province, announced Monday night that Antoine Gizenga, head of Stanleyville's 1961 Communist-supported breakaway government, will be freed soon from the island prison where he has been held for 2½ years.

With Gizenga's return, all surviving political leaders at the outset of The Congo's independence will be back in the political arena.

UNITED NATIONS (AP)—

United Nations Secretary-General U Thant said today a political reconciliation and retraining of the Congolese army are the two major and indispensable conditions for maintaining peace in The Congo.

WASHINGTON (AP)—A nuclear test in Nevada today sought further solutions to the problem of using atomic explosives for excavation projects such as harbors and canals.

The U.S. Atomic Energy Commission said the low-yield blast, with a force less than that of 20,000 tons of TNT, was set off underground at its Nevada test site.

Cornerstone Laid at Lake

SHAWNIGAN LAKE—The last phase of construction of the $25,000 Royal Canadian Legion Hall near here began at the weekend when members of the Malahat branch held a cornerstone-laying ceremony.

Past dominion president of the Legion, Alex Walker, of Mill Bay, officiated.

Excavation of the site, located on the Shawnigan-Mill Bay Road about a quarter mile from Shawnigan Lake, was carried out last fall. The foundations were poured this spring.

When completed, the hall will become the headquarters of the Malahat branch, whose 32 members have done all the work.

They expect to complete the 70-foot-by-30-foot building this year.

Future plans for the structure include the addition of a second storey when the need arises.

The project has been completely financed by legion members from proceeds of social events, assisted by the Ladies' Auxiliary.

Nazis Share Parade Before White House

WASHINGTON (AP)—Several hundred supporters of the Mississippi civil rights campaign picketed the White House Sunday night, holding lighted candles and chanting "We shall overcome."

Sharing the White House sidewalk with them was the largest concentration of pickets from the American Nazi party ever seen at the executive mansion.

The civil rights pickets represented the Congress of Racial Equality and were conducting a vigil for Mississippi freedom workers.

Fifteen of the Nazi party members, all but one in brown shirts and hobnailed boots, paraded simultaneously but were allotted a separate segment of the sidewalk in front of the White House.

The Nazi party group carried the United States flag and the swastika of Nazi Germany as well as placards reading: "Who needs Niggers," and "Send troops to New York to protect white victims from black crime."

BUSINESS VIEWS

Gas New Export To Japanese

By GORDON BELL
Times Business Editor

Westcoast Transmission president R. B. Stewart revealed in the company annual report this week that negotiations have actually been started with Japanese interests for the export of liquefied methane gas to Japan.

The Westcoast plan would be to liquefy "substantial volumes" of the LMG, which would be extracted from B.C. natural gas, at a tidewater plant in the Vancouver area and ship it to Japan in large refrigerated ships.

Confirmation by Mr. Stewart of a definite plan puts two Western Canadian companies into the export market for gas liquids.

WESTCOAST LEAD

Westcoast would seem to have the lead in the race since it already has the pipeline to the coast as well as substantial quantities of gas. The Bawden group will have to build a $40-million pipeline, from Edmonton, Alta., to Fort Moody along with the liquefying plant and will have to purchase its gas. In this case propane, from processing plants in the Edmonton area.

Mountain Pacific does not intend to market the LPG itself but reportedly has a tie-in with one of the major international oil companies to handle sales in Japan and other areas. It is expected that the major company will also take a share in financing the deal.

ISLAND MARKET

Both Westcoast and Mountain Pacific could be contenders for a market closer to home, Vancouver Island, and the chances that a pipeline will be built to carry natural gas here from the mainland seem dimmer than ever.

What has spurred Westcoast and the new company in their ventures is the remarkable rise in use of liquid gas products in Japan in recent years. Consumption has almost doubled in the last three years, from 1,040,000 tons in 1962 to an estimated 2,011,000 tons this year.

The Japanese transport industry is being rapidly converted to gas liquid power and the booming chemical industry is also making heavy demands on available supplies.

NO PROBLEM

Transportation of liquefied gas no longer seems to be much of a problem. Britain, with technical assistance from American interests, pioneered the use of refrigerated ships where the gas is held at the very low temperature of minus 260 degrees Fahrenheit. The gas liquids are secured from the Sahara fields and shipped to the Thames area.

There they are pumped ashore into insulated storage tanks and then fed through evaporators into a distribution system.

Most of the experts in the field concede that the business of shipping gas liquids by surface vessels is going to grow enormously in the next few years, and that the plans for submarine pipelines are generally being shelved.

The difficulty with a pipeline is that it is a fixed installation which has to be built big enough to anticipate demand growth for a long time ahead, and at the same time to run economically while demand is still low. With refrigerated tankers it is a more simple matter to add additional vessels as demand grows.

New 5 Million Grain Elevator For Vancouver

REGINA (CP)—The Saskatchewan Wheat Pool will build a 5,000,000-bushel terminal elevator at Vancouver, C. W. Gibbins, president of the giant grain-handling co-operative, said today.

Mr. Gibbins said preliminary work on plans is to begin immediately and it is hoped the new terminal, costing about $12,000,000, will be in operation within two years.

He said the terminal will increase Vancouver's grain-handling capacity by about 20 per cent, meeting demands of expanding markets in the Pacific. There has been some congestion in shipping facilities at Vancouver in recent record export years, Mr. Gibbins said.

The pool now has a 1,650-bushel terminal in Vancouver on a lease basis.

Grain shipped to the west coast from Saskatchewan pool elevators has been 30,000,000 to 45,000,000 bushels in each of the last three years.

The Alberta pool has handled the bulk of the Saskatchewan wheat which can't be accommodated in the existing Saskatchewan pool terminal.

It is hoped the new terminal will allow the Saskatchewan pool to handle all its own grain at Vancouver.

EXCHANGE CHANGED

CALGARY (CP)—F. G. Elves, president of the Calgary Stock Exchange, said Monday night that the Exchange Building at 7th Ave. S.W. will be demolished and replaced by a modern, multi-storey building. Mr. Elves made the announcement at a meeting marking the 15th anniversary of the founding of the Calgary Stock Exchange incorporated by the Alberta Legislature in 1914.

Net Earnings

MONTREAL (CP)—St. Lawrence COLUMBIUM and Metals Corp. today reported net earnings of $231,073 for the six months ended March 31, 1964. Value of production was $1,630,595.

Our seats lean over backwards to please you

Like all Rambler features, our exclusive reclining seats are designed to give "maximum usefulness to the user." We don't regard them simply as a place to sit. They are built to be an asset to your driving.

You can't be relaxed and alert if you're forced into a tiring, awkward position. And seats that just move back and forth aren't good enough. They only allow for leg length. Everyone has his own natural posture and Rambler seats recline at a touch to adjust to it. Their coil-spring construction supports you firmly. And their chair height places you right up where you have a clear, unobstructed view of the road ahead.

Reclining seats are our most distinctive comfort feature. But they are only one of many, each a part of Rambler's detail quality. It's this attention to detail that has made Rambler Canada's best car value.

Our seats may lean over backwards but we keep moving forward. Spend a pleasant hour looking over the newest Rambler features. Visit your nearest dealer soon.

These other exclusive Rambler features complete your comfort

HEADRESTS This distinctive option is available on few other cars. Inexpensive to install, they are a proven comfort and safety feature.

ROOFLINER Made of fibreglass, it's standard on the Classic and Ambassador. It insulates—keeps heat in during winter, heat out in summer. It also cuts noise by 30%.

DOUBLE DOOR SEALS An industry exclusive, double door seals protect you against draughts and dust. Curved glass side windows give extra shoulder room for added comfort.

GOLD RIVER—We are sheltering from the persistent West Coast dewfall (about 150 inches a year, they tell me) in the lee of a fat and silvery Vancouver Island Coach Lines carrier which has rolled us 56 miles from Campbell River.

Behind us are a canyon I'd hate to tumble into, a waterfall that in really wet weather gives passing cars a free wash, and a sequence of very good gravelled roads travelled five days a week by logging trucks.

Far back on the wonderfully scenic route we traversed this morning is Bert Jamieson, 78-year-old Elk River Timber Company guest house caretaker. Bert hasn't been too well lately. Coach line drivers like Jack Gray who fetched us across, give Bert a horn blast going by. If he doesn't show, they stop to investigate.

People do things that way in this big and hearty land where Canadian brawn and foreign investment capital are expanding beach-heads in one of our last North American frontiers.

Below us, Tahsis Company's boat Gold River settlement meets the saltchuck. Alongside the dock, a coaster which will presently take us to Friendly Cove has just outraged a prim little green Austin by rigging wire-rope slings under its belly and hiking it up, out and down to the plank.

On Uchuck III's forward deck, a blue outboard hull jam-packed with a family's possessions, waits its turn. Two umbrella handles poke from a shopping bag. A cardboard carton holds potted plants to brighten a habitation deep in the gut of some lost fiord.

There are other craft beside this pocket steamer, whose name in very loose translation means "ten-kettle spring of medicinal water."

Messenger III—they must run heavy to triplets in these parts—lies snug to a float. She's a mission boat with texts lettered front and side on her white deck-house. Inshore of her, Tahsis general manager Bill Ford is splicing a line in the cockpit of his trim and lovely motor-sailor Tahsala.

Within rifle range lie what may be the world's finest tree salmon grounds, a sheltered reach where company hands and a few visiting anglers shake the little 50-pounders off the hook while waiting for a big fellow to strike.

This is Gold River, British Columbia outpost of an industrial giant called East Asiatic which rules its manifold interests from Copenhagen, Denmark.

It's a simon-pure company town, only the coffee shop open to pilgrims, although the buzz is that 20 campsites may soon be laid out for the benefit of visitors who wish to tap that terrific salmon fishing.

Except on weekends, the road is closed to private cars, but you can board an Island Coach Lines bus at Campbell River each Wednesday, Saturday or Sunday at 10 a.m. for a $12 lunch-included round trip. Part of the jaunt is a cruise to Friendly Cove in the Ten-Kettle Spring of Medicinal Water. Travel time is an amiably elastic nine-and-a-half hours, five of them afloat.

We'll board staunch little Uchuck III another day. For now, let's take a closer look at the Gold River route, an engineering triumph which, according to its builders, is the most expensive logging road in the world.

For a mile and a half of the Tahsis Company link, it was cut through mountain rock at a cost of $2,000,000. In this stretch, it's as well to hit the horn before rounding the frequent bluffs that shadow the gravel.

Barrelling from the other direction, for all you know, may be a dusty car with a North Islander at the wheel and battered PR plates at bow and stern.

Private road plates. The cars that travel the outback obtain them—and the right to use government blacktop—for a $5 annual fee. Elk River Timber, whose limits you thread for most of the Gold River run, claims an amazing 370 miles of logging road, and Tahsis Company 130.

Many of Port Hardy's hardy residents now casually undertake the 180-mile gravel run south to do their weekend shopping at Campbell River.

By comparison the Gold River hop is sissy stuff. You will, however, be required to sign for passes at guarded gates. Smoking is restricted according to season, and the speed limit is 30 miles an hour.

But, heck, it's nice to go slow for a change—especially where a stone dropping from the shoulder will plummet 400 feet into white water with scarce a bounce!

BURNS LINDSEY
... save Victoria's reputation

Pole Crash Fatal

Car Passenger Dies At Campbell River

A 47-year-old man was killed when the car in which he was riding crashed into a power pole opposite the government wharf in Campbell River early this morning.

Dead is Douglas MacKenzie Alderson who recently moved to the up-Island city.

RCMP said the driver of the car, Jose Antonio Matias of Campbell River, has been charged with criminal negligence.

Two passengers in the car, Clarence McCaskill and Howard Cameron, were injured in the crash. Neither is believed seriously hurt although Cameron is still in hospital.

Police said the accident occurred at 12:40 a.m. today.

Hearing Called

A public hearing will be held at the next regular meeting of Esquimalt Council, into the application by Pacific Petroleum Ltd., for a gasoline service station at the junction of Esquimalt and Dunsuir. Council decided to take this course of an application by the firm for rezoning of the lot, to determine whether residents in the area would have any objections.

POLICE PATROL ASKED BY SEATTLE MAN

Hoodlums Scare Off Visiting Yachts

A Seattle yachtsman said today Victoria's Inner Harbor is gaining a reputation as a place not to visit because of youthful vandalism and rowdiness at night.

Burns Lindsey, a Seattle Yacht Club member who recently purchased Grouse Island off Campbell River, says many of his clubmates have said they will never return.

He says he does not feel safe because of teen-aged hoodlums who come down to the docks at night apparently looking for trouble. There is a lot of foul language and general unpleasantness, he contends.

But he thought there was a simple solution.

"Police cars must go past the harbor at least 20 times before midnight. I don't think it would be that much trouble for them to look over the wall once in a while," he says.

That might end the trouble. Mr. Lindsey cited many instances of trouble at the yacht floats.

THROWING BOTTLES

The other evening, says Mr. Lindsey, youths were throwing soft drink bottles up and down the dock.

"Recently a group of teenagers unfastened my spring line, but I woke up and chased them off," he says.

Had they unfastened his bow and stern lines, his $50,000 42-foot boat could have gone adrift with damaging results.

"Last year someone threw a beer bottle from the Causeway, but luckily it hit on the window frame of a boat up here from Portland."

"Next morning there was beer and broken glass all over the place. It would have cost $500 to replace the window had it shattered.

The owner of the boat left early that day and said he would never come back."

On another occasion, says Mr. Lindsey, he offered to help a pair of teenagers start an outboard.

"Then the owner of the boat came out on the deck of his yacht, and I found out I was helping the boys steal his outboard."

It's a saddening thing to Mr. Lindsey.

"I love this town," he says. "The people are so nice, and I would hate to see it lose its reputation."

Usually crowded at holiday, harbor is strangely deserted.

City Shocked by Refusal Of RCMP to Police Thetis

Constable Wouldn't Leave Car

City Hall officials today were dumbfounded by reports that the RCMP Colwood detachment refuses to police city-owned Thetis Lake Park in unorganized territory.

They said they would look into the situation after Vic-Van-Isle Kinsmen spokesman Alexander Grant told public works committee that recent vandalism at a temporary concession building brought an unsatisfactory investigation by RCMP.

Mr. Grant said he was told that an RCMP constable declined to get out of his car to investigate on the grounds that the detachment was purely a traffic squad and he could not leave the car radio.

'HARD TO BELIEVE'

"I just find that hard to believe," said Ald. Geoffrey Edgelow.

"I'm sure there must be some misunderstanding," said Mayor R. B. Wilson, "but the city does have to pay for guards during the day there and that just is one more point on how far the city taxpayers should go in providing a community park outside their boundaries."

$6,000 SOUGHT

The point came up during a Vic-Van-Isle Kinsmen request that the city provide $6,000 for a concrete block concession building which the club would operate to raise money for a $50,000 development program in the park. It would include dressing rooms, trail improvements, more parking space and a children's swimming beach.

HOW FAR?

"All this is very commendable but it raises the basic question of just how far the city must go in paying for a park outside its boundaries that is really a community park," said the mayor.

"This is a good example of the type of park that should be included in a regional parks system which I hope can be set up if the proposed joint services board is realized."

Committee tabled the club's request for report by parks administrator W. H. Warren and city manager Dennis Young.

Ballots Sealed by Deputy In Carpenter Strike Vote

A last-minute manoeuvre by deputy labor minister William Sands has averted a possible carpenters' strike but left principals unsure of the next move.

Mr. Sands Monday night took the rare step of sealing uncounted ballot boxes after a government-supervised strike vote among 350 carpenters at the Curling Rink.

The poll closed at 8 p.m. and Mr. Sands announced immediately his order to have the boxes sealed.

'HECK TO PAY'

He said if the move is simply the whim of a civil servant "there's going to be heck to pay."

"Some civil servant must have got mixed up—cancelling this exemption is going to upset our whole economy."

He said Alberta residents near the border, only six miles from here, would rather shop here than drive 50 miles to Grande Prairie, Alta.

$1 MILLION ANNUALLY

Many of the farmers sold their goods and spent their money in Dawson Creek.

Mayor Glen Braden of Dawson Creek said the move could hurt sales amounting to $1,000,000 a year in his city. Merchants were already feeling the pinch because of bad crops last year and loss of the RCAF base.

Dan Murray, publisher of the Alaska Highway News at Fort St. John, said if Albertans start selling in B.C. and buying in Alberta there will be a double drain in B.C. revenues. Already some British Columbians shopped in Alberta to avoid the sales tax.

the carpenters and the Victoria Building Industries Exchange (negotiating for contractors) together.

Boxes will remain sealed until negotiations have resumed, he said.

There is no limit on how long counting may be postponed, but Mr. Sands said the count cannot be delayed "unreasonably long."

B.C. Provincial Council of Carpenters secretary Art Leam said he "presumed negotiations will resume this week." He said union officials will have to study the move before commenting.

Contractor George Farmer said Mr. Sands seemed to feel "we could get together, at the last minute."

"The department of labor has so many problems it will probably do anything to help the relationship between employer and employees," he said.

Vote supervisor W. T. McLaughlin could not remember when the last such move was made.

Carpenters are seeking parity with Vancouver, an addition of 45 cents per hour on their current hourly rate of $3.

They recently turned down a majority conciliation report offering 67½ cents per hour over two years.

80% VOTED

About 80 per cent of those eligible to vote cast ballots.

The only possible hint of the result may be indicated by a strictly unofficial recommendation on two sample ballots posted on carpenters' offices at Union Centre.

Both have been marked for several days with crosses favoring strike action.

Change-Up Pitch Upsets Committee

A Greater Victoria Baseball Association demand that the city levy a nominal flat fee, if any, instead of charging 10 per cent of the gross gate for use of Royal Athletic Park left a slightly sour taste in city parks committee today.

"They told us they were happy with this last year and the city has bent over backwards for them," commented Ald. Cecil Parrott as committee rejected the request.

City manager Dennis Young said city council last November set a policy of allowing amateur groups to use the park free of charge except when they sell tickets to the public.

He said the 10 per cent gross and $7 for ticket sellers and takers provided by the city came nowhere near covering the city's maintenance costs but was levied as a matter of principle "so that public property cannot be used free of charge for financial gain."

"They could have the park free if they made no charge or just had a silver collection but they want to sell tickets," he said.

"The football clubs and all other groups using the park are quite happy with the new policy, and it is only the baseball group that seems to be complaining."

Parks administrator W. H. Warren pointed out the baseball association was offering a $1,000 prize to outside teams to enter its tournament here while pleading financial inability to pay the 10 per cent gross of its ticket revenues.

"Our policy is fair to everyone and their request is just unreasonable," said Ald. Geoffrey Edgelow.

"We've gone overboard to help the baseball people—much more than any other sport and I think our policy should stand."

$10,442 Contract

Lord and Durham Co. Ltd. was awarded a $10,442 contract today for construction of a new greenhouse, approximately 100 by 21 feet in Beacon Hill Park. Its bid was lowest of three on a square footage basis, city parks committee was told.

TOPICS of the DAY

St. Andrew's and Caledonian Society will hold a picnic Wednesday at the Dominion Experimental Farm.

Members wishing transportation are to meet at Holyrood House at 11 a.m.

Two new appointments to the Victoria Chapter of the World Council of Churches were made at a recent meeting.

Rev. C. L. Straight was appointed to succeed the late Dr. H. K. Johnston, and Rev. D. C. Scott was appointed in place of Rev. W. A. Williams.

Tonight's television show Reach for the Top—a quiz show in which a local high school team is competing—will start half an hour early at 7 p.m.

The four-man team from local high schools competes in the finals tonight, and the show has been lengthened to provide time for presentation of $2,000 in scholarship prizes.

About 15 Boy Scouts of the 6th Douglas Scout Troop will hold a bottle drive Saturday morning in the Burnside-Wildwood area. They are raising funds for scouting activities.

Ask The Times

Q. About how much does Canada spend on national defence?
T.A.R.

A. About 28 cents of every tax dollar goes to national defence.

Q. When did the Duke of Windsor abdicate the Throne of England? Where is he now living?
D.M.

A. In 1936. He is now living in France.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve conundrums or legal problems. We will attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps or antiques. These should be submitted to a dealer.

Victoria traffic committee today recommended that city council prohibit all parking in lanes behind buildings. Committee was told many of the lanes, used for deliveries, are blocked frequently by parked cars but police have no authority to issue tickets at present.

Winners of the recent Vic-Van-Isle Kinetite Bridge tournament were: 1, Eric Horwood and Walter Allen; 2, Mrs. Lillian Heathfield and Simon Vanderjagt.

Group winners were: Mrs. Alma Halliday and Mrs. Florence Trace; George and Dorothy Colgate; Art Kay and Daniel Butler.

A man who recorded bets for a bookmaker paid a $200 fine in cash when he appeared in court today.

Clarence Foster, an employee of Blue Bell Confectionery, 709 Johnson Street, was found surrounded by "racing paraphernalia" when Detective Lorne Johnson walked into the back of the store on the afternoon of June 13.

Foster told Det. Johnson he only recorded the bets and then telephoned them to the bookmaker. He refused to tell police who the "bookie" was.

A homing pigeon owned by John Arnaud averaged about 24 miles an hour to win a race from Blue River to Victoria on Sunday.

The bird covered the 300 air miles in 12 hours, 13 minutes and 56 seconds.

In second place was Barnie Wooley's bird, with 12:14.56, and in third place was Charlie Wooley's bird at 12:16.13.

Seventeen members shipped 78 birds in the race.

Dick Nelsteyn's pigeon won the second race that day from Birch Island, a distance of 265 air miles, in 11:32.12.

Runners up were: Dick Roe, 11:33.29; Harvey Roth, 11:49.16. There were 10 birds in the race.

A coroner's jury Monday found that Mrs. Charlotte Oliver died of asphyxia at Oak Lodge Private Hospital June 28.

The jury did not attach blame to anyone in the death of the 90-year-old woman. A post mortem showed she died of choking although it was first thought the cause of death was a heart attack.

Evidence showed hospital staff tried to revive Mrs. Oliver.

Next year's Canadian Civil Service Conference will be held in Victoria with Dr. H. M. Morrison, B.C. Civil Service commissioner, as chairman.

The group held its first annual meeting last week in Halifax, where Nova Scotia C.S. commissioner G. E. Perry was named president.

Books for school standing were given to seven Lochside School pupils recently by the Parent Auxiliary.

Winners for each grade, one to seven inclusive, were: Anne Kelly, Karl Phillips, Carolyn Fraser, Harris Taylor, Beth Johnston, Ann Briggs and Kristin Dunn.

Principles" at meeting in Room give a talk on "Infinite Way Principles" at a meeting in Room 165, Empress Hotel, at 7:45 p.m. July 6, sponsored by the local group interested in the "Infinite Way" movement.

Canadian National Railway Pensioners will hold their annual picnic at 2 p.m. Friday in Beacon Hill Park.

Tea and coffee will be served. Members are to provide their own lunches.

SLEEPING CHILDREN DIE

SULLIVAN
...balled out

HAVERHILL, Mass (UPI)—A pilotless jet fighter plane crashed with the explosive fury of a bomb early today into three homes and a dozen parked cars in a residential area of this industrial city. Two sleeping children were killed.

The pilot, with an agonizing prayer that the area below was uninhabited, ejected himself from the F96 single-seater craft and parachuted to safety. He landed in a tree top.

The plane dropped silently and swiftly in the blackness shortly after midnight and crashed with a thunderous roar on Lackney Street. The street was transferred into a sea of flames.

The plane ricocheted off one house, veered crazily down the street bouncing off parked cars and another house, and plunged some first into the bedroom of a third house where the children were asleep with their pet dog.

"The kids never had a chance," a policeman said.

Dead are Pamela Gifford, 11, and her brother Todd, 8, children of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Gifford. The dog also was killed. The parents were hysterical. They were taken to a hospital for treatment.

The pilot, Capt. Dalbert F. Sullivan of Boston's Back Bay section, said the engine went dead on him after a small explosion. Before ejecting himself, he said he turned the plane to "a black area," hoping no houses were below.

Sullivan, father of five children, apparently thought he would not survive. He said, "I prayed that my five children would get a good father. I prayed the area was uninhabited."

After landing in the tree, Sullivan climbed down and made his way to the swift-flowing Merrimack River. He inflated his portable raft and floated out on the river until he was rescued.

IN COMPLETE DARK

Joseph Bitonti, who was watching a late show on television, said he heard "an enormous noise, like an atomic bomb, and I saw a mass of flames."

"I saw Earl Gifford (father of the dead children) wandering around in a complete daze. I shouted, 'Watch out for the live wires and flames.' He just groaned."

Matthew Cummings, who lives next door to the Giffords, said his house shook as if struck by lightning.

Bob Kennedy Sees Primate

CZESTOCHOWA (AP)—Robert F. Kennedy met for more than an hour in a 600-year-old monastery today with Stefan Cardinal Wyszyński, key figure in the tense relations between Poland's Communist government and the Roman Catholic Church.

The U.S. attorney-general met the primate of Poland in the cloister of the monastery which attracts millions of Polish Catholic pilgrims.

Rezoning Sought For James Bay Shopping Centre

Rezoning for eight lots at Simcoe and Croft to provide space for building a local area shopping centre was requested today by Macs Homes and Investments Ltd.

The application at City Hall said a new Safeway store, a bank, restaurant and several small shops would be grouped around a shopping mall on property combined with the present site of a Safeway store.

Macs Investments also is building a 12-storey high-rise apartment block across the street.

U.S. Gives More Atomic Secrets To NATO Nations

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Johnson notified Congress today that he has approved a new agreement to extend the types of atomic information the United States may give to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and its member nations.

The new agreement supersedes an earlier one, under which NATO and its members have been receiving some atomic information for the last several years.

In notifying Congress of the new agreement, Johnson said the expanded area of information is needed to make effective use of nuclear delivery systems being provided by the U.S. under bi-lateral procedures and agreements that followed creation of NATO atomic stockpiles in 1957.

Also, Johnson said, the new agreement will permit NATO member countries to share in information that the U.S. has been exchanging only with NATO itself, under a 1953 agreement.

"This will make these countries' role in alliance planning in the nuclear field more effective," Johnson said.

He said the new agreement "represents a logical and useful step in our continuing and varied efforts to ensure wider allied participation into NATO nuclear defenses."

Furthermore, Johnson said, "such wider participation is necessary on both military and political grounds. It is needed to enhance the effectiveness of NATO defenses. On political grounds, it is needed to reinforce NATO cohesion in meeting our allies' legitimate desire to make a constructive contribution to nuclear defense."

Under the Atomic Energy Act, the joint House of Representatives-Senate atomic energy committee must have 7 days' notice before the agreement can go into effect.

Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara and Glenn T. Seaborg, chairman of the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission, had recommended that the president approve the broadening agreement.

In a memorandum to Johnson, they stressed that the new agreement makes clear that there will be no transfer of atomic weapons or atomic weapons systems involving restricted data.

Experts said this provision would rule out any information or equipment that would help make any NATO member an independent nuclear power.

The bitter showdown will come after mid-July. The Conservatives will demand to know if the government insists on approving the new flag before the members get their summer recess. If the answer is "yes" the Conservatives will dig in their heels and start discussing interim supply at length.

A summer-recess without the flag being approved, or no passage of interim supply, that will be the bargaining point for the Tories. What will the government do faced with that impasse?

The fight will come in the heat of July. Meantime, Commons hopes to buy at least 10 days of comparative peace so that it can get the above listed legislation through the House.

OIL BARGE EXPLOSION KILLS FOUR, 13 MISSING

MORGAN CITY, La. (AP)—

An explosion and fire roared through a floating oil rig in pre-dawn darkness today, plunging the multi-million-dollar apparatus into the depths of the Gulf of Mexico. At least four persons were killed, another 13 persons or more were missing.

Twenty-five survivors were brought to hospital here. Some were burned but a hospital spokesman said all were in satisfactory condition.

The dead were not immediately identified. Helicopters ferried the survivors to this coastal fishing town about 70 miles west of New Orleans.

The rig sank in 120 feet of water, about 15 minutes after the explosion and wind-whipped flames blanketed the vessel.

At least 42 men were aboard the twin-hulled rig, which was operating 78 miles southwest of Morgan City.

Half the men on the "C. P. Baker" were asleep when the explosion occurred about 3:30 a.m.

The first survivors to reach here said the on-duty crew hit a shallow high-pressure pocket of gas while drilling in the Gulf of Mexico at 640 feet. The gas began seeping up into the rig.

FLOOR BUCKLED

"The floor began to buckle and we knew it was time to get off," said one survivor.

Some had got a workboat alongside when sparks on the rig touched off the explosion.

Those on board were trapped momentarily by flames which leaped skyward and roared the rig and surrounding waters. Wind whipped the flames away from one side of the rig and some of the men were able to jump into the water.

"It stood up on its end and down the west," said another survivor, describing how the drilling rig sank in more than 100 feet of water.

A spokesman for Reading and Bates here said the C. P. Baker, built last year, cost his company "about $6,000,000." He said the firm has four other rigs operating in the gulf.

ADOUA

Canadians Fly Home

(Times News Services)
LEOPOLDVILLE — The resignation of Prime Minister Cyrille Adoula's government has been accepted, President Joseph Kasavubu announced today.

The mandate of Adoula's cabinet officially expired today, the fourth anniversary of the Congo's independence.

But Kasavubu asked the government to stay in office until a new constitution, now before the country in a two-week referendum, has been approved, as it is expected to be.

There was widespread expectation that the new government would be headed by Moise Tshombe, the secessionist president of Katanga province whose defiance of Adoula's government was ended by the UN Congo force early in 1963.

Tshombe returned from self-imposed exile in Europe last week and embarked on a reconciliation mission to bring together the still turbulent African country's feuding politicians.

UN TROOPS LEAVE

The announcement of Adoula's resignation coincided with the departure of the last UN troops—Canadians and Nigerians—ending the United Nations military operation in the Congo.

An RCAF transport took off with 58 members of a Canadian army signal unit. A few minutes later a chartered DC-8 left with 85 men of the Nigerian Army's 1st Battalion.

Last man aboard was the UN's last commander, Maj.-Gen. J. Aguiy-Tsoni of Nigeria, ending the UN military operation that began only two months after independence from Belgium June 30, 1960, brought anarchy and chaos to the Congo.

The Canadian Signalers were handed poinsettia blooms as they mounted the ramp for the first leg of their long flight to Trenton, Ont. The first stop was Pisa, Italy.

MONEY LACKING

The UN ended its military role in the former Belgian colony today for lack of money. There were no parades or ceremonies to mark the departure of the UN troops.

Those on hand included the civilian chief of the UN Congo operation, Bibiano Osofo of Mexico, some 50 members of the diplomatic corps, and friends.

The gradual UN withdrawal started about three months ago. About 50 Pakistani soldiers running an ordinance depot here will stay as part of the UN's civilian operation.

With the military pullout complete, only 400 Nigerian police remain in the Congo—all in Leopoldville and mostly for training purposes—to help Congo.

Copper Project Ready to Roll

British Columbia's largest — and most costly — copper property is expected to be in production within three years.

Granduc Mines Ltd., a subsidiary of Newmont Mining Corp. of New York announced today it has arranged financing for its $55,000,000 copper project about 35 miles northwest of Stewart at the head of the Portland Canal. The property is in rugged mountainous country at the head of the South Unk and Leduc Rivers.

The company plans to drive a 30 to 13-mile tunnel under the Leduc Glacier to connect with road systems to transport its copper concentrates from the mine to tidewater near Stewart.

Granduc estimates that the property contains ore reserves of 32,500,000 tons grading about 1.93 per cent copper. A mill handling from 7,000 to 8,000 tons of ore daily will produce concentrates at a rate equivalent to 42,500 tons of copper metal annually.

The concentrates are to be shipped to the refinery of the American Smelting and Refining Co. at Tacoma, Wash. American Smelting has agreed to purchase all production for 10 years and has advanced Granduc $10,000,000.

TOUGH 'HOSS' LEADS ANTI-SEGREGATION FIGHT 'No White Man Scared of Nigger'

By PAUL WILLS

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla. (AP) — Holsted (Hoss) Manuey, a tough, barrel-chested man wearing an old cowboy hat, commands a big, well-organized army here in a furious fight against racial integration.

Its goal, Manuey says in his thick, slow southern drawl, is "to keep our kids white kids for the next 100 generations" in this tourist city now in the throes of daily racial violence. Manuey's group claims 1,476 members and a better communications system than the regular law enforcement agencies. It has frequently given aid to the police and sheriff's office.

fort to blunt the assault of St. Augustine's racial barriers by Dr. Martin Luther King's Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

"We're not responsible for the rock throwing in the square or the fighting on the beach," Manuey says. "That was done by kids who are not members. We can't control every kid."

SAVED ONE LIFE

Manuey was credited with saving a policeman's life by wresting a gun from a white man angered because officers used tear gas to stop a white counter-demonstration. Manuey's organization is called the Ancient City Hunting Club. It has a clubhouse and a hunting preserve.

Recently, when federal Judge Bryan Simpson saw Manuey's name on a list of special deputies, he noted that Hoss was an ex-convict and wondered if his club wasn't a branch of the Ku Klux Klan.

"Sure, I've got a record," Manuey said. "Everybody around here knows that. It's a whisky record. I never stole anything."

"We're not tied to the Klan in any way, although I'm not knocking the Klan. It's a wonderful organization."

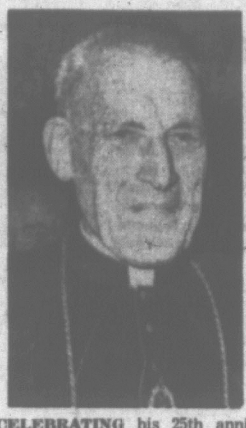

Last week, Manuey's organization kicked off a campaign to have white employers fire their Negro help. Some, he says, already have done so and others will follow suit.

"A nigger can't make a living without a white man," Manuey says. "He will have to go north, where the welfare cheques are bigger."

"That's the way to win this fight without bloodshed." Manuey and Sheriff L. O. Davis, who are close friends, are credited by many with helping to prevent violence by whites.

Manuey says he has received many threats. Bricks have been thrown through the windows of his cars. Last year, a shot was fired into a car driven by one of Manuey's sons, killing another man in the car.

But Manuey says he isn't afraid. "There's no white man scared of a nigger. That's a proven fact in St. John's County."

Fraudulent Financier Vanishes

LONDON (Reuters) — Kenneth de Courcy, editor, publisher, and financier sentenced at London's central criminal court last December to seven years imprisonment for fraud, perjury and forgery, disappeared Monday night from his lawyer's office here.

De Courcy, 54, was visiting the office in connection with his appeal against the conviction.

Earlier in the day he appeared before the Court of Criminal Appeal.

The 11 charges on which he was sentenced arose mainly from a $1,000,000 plan for property development in Southern Rhodesia. It involved the building of a township near Salisbury and large subscriptions had been received from the investigating public.

De Courcy left the lawyer's office while prison officers were a short distance away, a security officer said. The office is 200 yards from the law courts.

High-Rise Plan Shot Down By Esquimalt

Plans to build a high-rise apartment block with a seventh floor restaurant in Esquimalt never got off the floor at Esquimalt council on Monday.

The council decided the plans would not be acceptable as they stand at present.

The proposal was for a six-storey apartment block with a rooftop restaurant, at Esquimalt Road and Woollaston.

But municipal engineer John Graeme said present plans for the building were not acceptable.

He said a rooftop restaurant would attract a lot of people who might prove a nuisance to residents of the building. He suggested housing the restaurant on the ground floor.

The present site, he said, would not leave enough clearance either side between existing buildings.

He suggested that the firm which proposes putting up the block, M. and H. Holdings Ltd. of Victoria, should consider obtaining more land.

At present there would be only 10 feet clearance on one side and 12 feet on the other. Council would require in the region of 50 feet.

The council agreed to consider the plans if these changes were made.

THIRD CONSECUTIVE term as president of the ruling Liberal-Democratic party will be sought by Japanese Premier Hayato Ikeda. "I'm completely confident I'll win on the first ballot," he said. Convention is set for July 10.

FOR LEADERSHIP

Two Islanders Win Scout Merit Medals

Two southern Vancouver Island men have been awarded Medals of Merit for their services to the Boy Scout movement. It was announced today.

Athole G. (Lofty) Coning, of Victoria and Burnaby, and John T. Martin, of Milne's Landing, were given the awards for leadership services.

Mr. Coning, manager of the Victoria Mayfair shopping centre here, lives in Burnaby, and is a member of the Burnaby regional council.

He began working in the Scout movement after he retired from the navy in 1947.

32 YEARS — Mr. Martin has been engaged in or associated with the movement for 32 years, and has been district commissioner since 1960.

He received his long service medal in 1961.

Mr. Martin has been scout master of three troops, and was assistant district commissioner for one year before taking his present post.

'Canadians Lack Contact With U.S. Racial Views'

GENEVA PARK, Ont. (CP) — Canada has no race problem because there are "no niggers" and Indians are segregated on government reserves, William Simmons of Jackson, Miss., an administrator of the Citizen's Councils of America, said Monday.

Addressing 77 high school students at a week-long conference on race problems sponsored by the United Nations Association of Canada, Mr. Simmons said Canadians cannot be expected to understand a situation with which they have so little contact.

"I believe I am the first citizen's council representative to speak in Canada, which indicates that our views are not known to you," he told the audience at this conference site near Orillia.

"And I see that in Canada you have no race problems because you have no niggers and your Indians are segregated on government reservations," he added.

He said propaganda has distorted and distorted the Negro's actual feelings and experience in the South. The southern Negroes themselves were embarrassed and resentful of northern agitators and missionaries who went to Mississippi. Mr. Simmons, who edits a newspaper of the Citizen's Councils, said many people in the South would be astonished to be told they had race problems.

"We have no such upheavals as have racked England," he said. "Negroes get a better education in southern separate schools than they do in northern integrated ones, and we show a remarkable tact and courtesy to our Negro neighbors. Government laws could never achieve that."

Robert Gore of the Congress of Racial Equality was originally scheduled to rebut Mr. Simmons' argument but cancelled his engagement because of the disappearance of three civil rights workers in Mississippi.

COUNCIL BRIEFS

Flower Sale Plan Starts to Droop

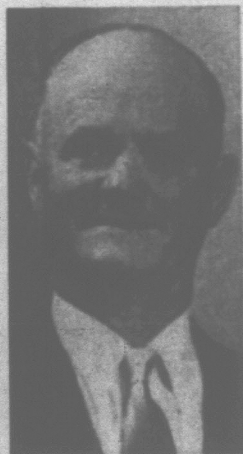

Victoria council, which asked the South Vancouver Island Florists and Growers Association to operate a cut-flower stall on the Causeway, showed a mixed reaction Monday to the association's counter-proposal.

The group suggested a tastefully designed stall, costing about $400, should be set up on the southwest corner of Yates and Douglas instead and it should be provided by the city.

The proposal was sent to committee for study after Mayor R. B. Wilson pointed out the idea sprang from council as a tourist attraction and it might be worth considering that the city own the stall so it could control its operation.

However, both Ald. Geoffrey Edgelow and Ald. M. H. Mooney said they had serious misgivings about allowing a retail operation on city streets. Ald. Edgelow added he felt the association should buy some property and establish its own stall.

"After all, we just turned down the little Italian ice cream man on these grounds when he proposed something similar which would have delighted the little kiddies as much as this stall would delight the adults," pointed out Ald. Edgelow.

WEDMAN funeral Thursday

Homesteader Of Leduc Dies Here

A homesteader from the Leduc area in Alberta died here Saturday after a lengthy illness.

William Wedman of 606 Moss Street was one of 23 children born to Gottlieb Wedman, who emigrated to the Leduc area from Russia in 1892.

Mr. Wedman, born in 1894, homesteaded in the area and continued to farm there until 1958 when he retired to Victoria.

He had always been an active Lutheran and funeral services will be held at Grace Lutheran Church Thursday at 3:30 p.m. Rev. William A. Williams will officiate and burial will follow at Hatley Memorial Gardens. Hayward's Funeral Co. Ltd. is in charge of funeral arrangements.

Mr. Wedman is survived by the widow, Elsie, 13 children and 14 grandchildren.

Children are Mrs. Oscar (Helen) Witt and Mrs. Wilbert (Martha) Behn of Wisconsin; Mrs. Jack (Mildred) Crapelle, Ottawa; Martin, Harold and Mrs. Peter (Rose) Evanechko of Leduc; Mrs. Sam (Eleanor) Bochie, Edmonton; Mrs. Jim (Florence) Evans, Oakland, Calif.; Mrs. Paul (Theresa) Medley, San Bernardino, Calif.; Mrs. Hans (Doris) Intscher, Grande Prairie, Alta.; and Douglas, Carolyn and Linda of Victoria.

Instant Diabetes Test

TORONTO (CP) — The International Diabetes Federation announced here Sunday that a new "instant" blood testing process for the detection of diabetes has been developed.

The federation said in a statement preliminary reports on the process indicate it is so "reliable and simple" that national diabetes detection programs now become a possibility.

The statement said a report on a diabetes survey in Britain has led medical men to believe that the world's diabetic population may be about 200,000,000, more than three times higher than present estimates.

One of the conclusions emerging from the British survey was that urine tests in mass surveying are unreliable and the only way of detecting "hidden" diabetes is by blood tests to determine the sugar content in the system.

The new process, to be known by the trade name of Dextrosix, was developed by the A. E. Ames Company of Elkhart, Ind.; the statement said. It has been undergoing rigid clinical tests in Canada and the United States for the last six months. The test requires only one minute to administer.

ATKINS ROAD New School Awaits Principal

Philip A. Lindgren, 30, is a principal without a school.

Just-named principal of an unnamed, un-built elementary school in District 62, Mr. Lindgren was vice-principal of Langford Elementary School. He will stay there until his new school is built, probably next winter.

The new school is planned as part of a three-year school construction-expansion referendum to be put to ratepayers in Sooke school district in October.

It will be located at Atkins and Goldstream, which has been cleared in readiness.

OVERFLOW

Tentatively called the Atkins Road School, the new project will have three rooms and take overflow shift classes from Langford Elementary.

Mr. Lindgren will be principal of these classes from the time they are organized this fall in Langford school, although that school's regular principal will remain in overall charge of the school.

It is hoped by school trustees that because of the nearness of the new site to E and N Railway tracks a pedestrian overpass may be built.

CANADIAN PLAYERS

Playhouse Pays Off Before It's Finished

MacPherson Playhouse is paying theatrical dividends even before its renovation is completed.

The nation's leading road company plans to extend its annual one-night stand here to three days this year on the strength of the playhouse's promise, it was learned today.

After looking over the development "I decided that Victoria is well on its way to becoming one of the most important theatre cities in North America," T. B. Hendry, administrator of the Canadian Players Foundation has written various persons here.

NEW PLAY

"For this reason, in scheduling our tour of Canada with the new play 'All About Us,' I propose to visit Victoria for three nights."

The show will be presented here Dec. 14 to 16—too early for the opening of the playhouse—so it will be staged in some other building.

Mr. Hendry said community organizations are needed to sponsor each of the three nights.

The playhouse's recently appointed manager, Robert Ellison, strongly backed the foundation's request for sponsors.

PLAYHOUSE TYPE

"This is one of the kinds of road show we would be very pleased to book into the playhouse once we are in operation and I certainly hope that sponsors will come forward to fill the breach for this year," he said.

"It would certainly put us at a disadvantage in trying to book them here in future years if for any reason they had to miss Victoria this year."

The foundation, in operation for the past 11 years with Canada Council assistance and patronage of the governor-general, has been revamped this year to branch out beyond the classical plays.

"All About Us" was especially commissioned by the Canada Council as a good-humored spoof at Canadians.

It opens in Winnipeg this fall with a three-week run and already has been booked for 63 of its scheduled 105 performances which will make it the longest running original Canadian play ever.

JUNGLE WARFARE operations is job planned for this aircraft designed by Lockheed Aircraft Corp. Plane, with two 660 horsepower turboprop engines, can operate from short dirt fields, aircraft carriers, or with floats from waterways. It will carry eight combat troops plus up to 1,200 pounds of bombs or rockets on each wingtip and another 2,400 pounds under fuselage. (CP photo.)

It's Hydroponic... and It Pays Off

RICHTER
... back from Orient

Hydroponic agriculture may have a place on Saanich Peninsula, Agriculture Minister Frank Richter indicated on his return from the Orient.

Back in his office Monday after a 23-day trade mission of 15 government and official representatives, Mr. Richter said the Japanese method of using water-borne fertilizers in greenhouse culture may be introduced here.

Both the Lower Island and Fraser Valley areas have substantial hothouse development for small vegetable and flower production.

Hydroponic farming in Japan, Mr. Richter said, greatly speeded up growth of cucumbers, string beans, pineapples and potatoes.

It also enables the farmer, the minister said, to gear his production to high price markets.

Introduction of the hydroponic methods—using water to supply chemical nutrients to plants—could "substantially increase" production in existing greenhouses through the province, he said.

But it would take some time to assess all the information gathered on the Japanese trip and decide what can be adapted to B.C. use.

AUTOMATED

Plastic tubing to carry the chemical-laden water supply is laid in trenches filled with gravel. The supply of water is controlled by highly automated methods to offset the serious shortage of farm labor in Japan, the minister said.

Mr. Richter found the Japanese were interested in buying more Canadian wheat and certain "specialty items" such as seeds and foundation dairy stock. The minister said he felt "some potential" existed for increased trade in agricultural items in this category.

The minister also found glass is a better cover than plastic, producing as much as 50 per cent bigger crop. Japan is ahead of Canada in technical agriculture, he said.

RCAF HAS ONE-TWO PUNCH

OTTAWA (CP)—Two wings of the RCAF air division in Europe now have nuclear arms, Defence Minister Hellyer said Monday in the Commons.

Replying to Gordon Churchill, former Conservative defence minister, Mr. Hellyer said No. 3 wing at Zweibrücken and No. 4 wing in Baden-Soellingen, both in West Germany, "have been operational for some time."

Mr. Churchill: "Does that mean they are equipped with nuclear arms and that some of the planes are standing on quick action alert?"

Mr. Hellyer: "That is correct."

Ice Breaker's Sailing Halted

QUEBEC (CP)—The departure of the Arctic supply vessel Simon Fraser, which had been scheduled for today, has been delayed a few days while the Canadian Coast Guard ship undergoes a minor overhaul.

A definite new departure date was not announced.

A total of 18 ships of the Canadian Coast Guard are being made ready for the department of transport's 1964 Arctic supply operations, which will get under way early in July.

Until late October, the ice-breaker fleet will be busy in waters ranging from the southern shores of James Bay to the edge of the permanent polar ice.

They will be escorting government-chartered cargo vessels carrying once-a-year shipments of vital supplies to weather stations and defence outposts.

When the cargo-moving work is done, scientific groups from government departments concerned with Arctic research will be busy with hydrographic, oceanographic and related studies, using the ships as their bases of operation.

When the season has ended, an estimated 100,000 tons of supplies of all types will have been handled by the fleet and the freighters it shepherds northward. In addition, its ice-breakers will have provided escort to transatlantic commercial ships carrying cargo between Churchill, Man., and European ports through Hudson Bay and Hudson Strait.

V.I. Towns Plan Big Day To Mark Canada's Birth

As Canada celebrates Dominion Day Wednesday, there will be no lack of enthusiasm on Vancouver Island.

Here are some of the events organized by the different areas:

SIDNEY: Sidney Day Parade will report to the route of three years ago, assembling at Queen's and Third at 10:30 a.m., then wending its way to Beacon Avenue.

From there it will go to Fifth Street and police will then marshal it on to Sanscha Hall.

In the parade will be many notable teams, including Victoria Chinatown Club's drum and bell corps, the Loyal Order of the Moose marching teenage team, a clown unit from Victoria Shrine Club, IOOF Robinettes drill team, Treasure Island Sweetheart baton corps and the Royal Canadian Legion Esquimalt pipe band.

CROWNING

At 12:30 p.m. Joan Gardner will be crowned Miss Sidney by retiring queen and Miss P.N.E., Linda Douma. Princess Ann Jeffrey and Daphne Green will also be crowned.

During the afternoon, starting with the Elks Flag Day Ceremony, there will be a variety of entertainments for all age groups. Michael Williams' trained dogs will give a display at 1:30 p.m., followed at 2 p.m.

by a square dancing display by the Junior Swinging Eights.

For music lovers there will be band music 2:30 p.m. to 3 p.m., followed by Fred Usher and his entertainers until 4 p.m.

During the evening, 9 p.m. to 1 a.m., there will be a dance open to all age groups in the Sanscha Hall.

ALBERNI: Mill sports have been added to the loggers events during the second Annual Elks celebrations in Sproat Lake Park starting 10 a.m.

Contestants in the log burling, chopping, sawing, jousting, axe-throwing, shingle packing, lumber grading, eye splicing and women's nail driving events, will come from all over the island and the U.S.

CHEMUNUS: A big holiday parade, with 11 bands among the 86 entries, will leave Horse-shoe Bay Inn at 12:30 p.m.

Children's sports will be held in Chemainus ball park in the morning, followed by the choosing of the queen at 2:15 p.m.

There will also be a marching display by sea cadets and a diving display by the Silk Angels sky diving club.

COURTENAY: Starting with a horse show in Centennial Park at 10 a.m., Courtenay will hold a three-part program. There will be a gymkhana in the Square at noon, followed by an appearance in Lewis Park at 5 p.m. of B.C. Lions who begin their 10-day training camp.

DUNCAN: Cowichan district riding club will begin its annual Dominion Day horse show on the exhibition grounds at 10:30 a.m.

TOFINO: Children's and adult sports will be held throughout the day.

Ivan Had Rich Tastes

MOSCOW (AP)—Ivan Schibyrn was just an ordinary shop manager but he had expensive tastes. He had a new Volga auto, a house of his own and gave champagne and vodka parties.

How did he do it on a salary of only 90 rubles ($100) a month?

According to the newspaper Trud (labor), he was one of five ringleaders of a massive embezzlement racket that netted 6,000,000 rubles.

Trud says the ring did its work in the Ukrainian mining town of Donetsk.

Trud does not say exactly how the four made all their money, but the method could have followed the pattern of other such cases. One way is to sell short weight, another to sell low-quality goods at first-quality prices and pocket the difference, to rig the books, or to take bribes from persons waiting for scarce goods.

Trud says the five were able to build fine new houses, while their law-abiding comrades live in apartment blocks. Trucks would arrive at these houses loaded with such items as crystal, expensive chinaware, thick carpets and modern furniture.

Rites on Thursday

The death Saturday of Mary Constance Babington, 710 Fort, marked the end of a chapter of early Victoria history.

Mrs. Babington was the last surviving child of the first white child born at Fort Victoria.

Daughter of the Hon. Alec Davie, QC, one-time MP for Lil-loet, and the former Constance Langford Skinner, the first white child born here, Mrs. Babington is survived by six nephews, including provincial Conservative leader and former federal works minister Davie Fulton.

Mrs. Babington was born in Victoria in 1880. She graduated from the Royal Jubilee Hospital school of nursing in 1907 and practised nursing at Prince Rupert, Powell River, Tofino, Duncan, Kamloops and Victoria, retiring two years ago at the age of 78.

Prayers will be held at Hayward's Funeral Chapel 7 p.m. Wednesday. Requiem Mass will be celebrated in St. Andrew's Cathedral at 10 a.m. Thursday.

Film Hamlet To Get Brief Theatre Play

NEW YORK (AP)—Broadway's Hamlet, starring Richard Burton, is being made into a movie that 1,000 theatres will be allowed to show just four times.

The unusual project was announced Monday as a joint undertaking of three companies. The strict limitation on number of performances was stipulated by Burton and Alexander H. Cohen, producer of the stage production which opened its tryout run in Toronto.

Pointing out the experimental nature of the undertaking, the actor said he and his fellow-performers reserved the right to look the film over after passage of at least three years.

"Acting styles change," he declared. "I think there will be a big bonfire in Times Square at some future time if we don't like what we see then."

Three performances of Hamlet are being filmed at the Lunt-Fontanne Theatre before regular audiences, starting tonight.

USE FIVE CAMERAS

Five cameras are used, and filming of the drama three times enables the crews to shoot from 15 positions. The final screen version will be edited for best shots, but without any cutting of the 3½-hour performance time.

Participating in the project are American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres, which is underwriting the $350,000 cost; Warner Brothers, handling distribution; and Electronovision, which owns the film process.

Leonard H. Goldenson, president of American Broadcasting, said the picture will be screened simultaneously throughout the United States and Canada for two matinee and two evening performances in late September. The Broadway run ends Aug. 8.

Goldenson said a potential audience of 5,000,000 would see the movie, at an average expected admission price of $2.

Appearing with Burton in Hamlet are Canadian-born Hume Cronyn, Alfred Drake and Eileen Herlie.

New Bus Service For Trial Period

A new bus service between Parklands and Victoria will go into operation for a 90-day trial period on July 6.

This was reported to Esquimalt Council on Monday following requests by residents in the area for such a service.

Times of the buses will be as follows. Leave city 7:30 a.m., leave Parklands 7:53 a.m., arrive city 8:15 a.m. Leave Parklands 8:20 a.m., arrive city 8:40 a.m. Lv. city 10:15 a.m., lv. If the buses are well used then the service will be continued after the trial period is over.

In addition there will be an early morning bus for school children.

Train Hits Car, 3 Die

HUMBOLDT, Sask. (CP)—A CNR freight train plowed into a car at an unprotected level crossing near Humboldt Monday night, killing three persons and seriously injuring six others. Dead are Mrs. Clara Koob, 33, of Mescham, Sask., her two-year-old daughter Marina, and a niece, Frances Hofmann, 19, of Meunster, Sask.

When people think of phoning you, are you only half there?

People looking up a number in a telephone directory are usually in a hurry.

If they can't find your name quickly and easily, they sometimes have an unfortunate habit of calling one of your competitors. That's why additional listings pay for themselves many times over.

If you're an accountant or an hotelkeeper, a lawyer or a veterinary surgeon, an architect or a taxi operator, you are only one of the thousands of different business and professional people who can benefit by listing themselves under more than one heading.

The same applies if your name is difficult to remember accurately. A company called Johnson & Jackson, for example, would be wise to take out an additional listing under "Jackson & Johnson".

There are many other cases in which an additional listing or listings can help ensure that you get the fullest possible share of business. The cost of these valuable safeguards? About 2½ cents per day. At this price you really can't afford to be only half there!

Call our Marketing and Sales Department or your local B.C. TEL Business Office this week and discuss with one of our experienced consultants what additional listings you could profitably use. No obligation, of course.

Bread Prices Increase One Cent

Bread prices have increased one cent to 23 cents a loaf here, in line with Vancouver increases.

The price hikes, in Victoria Monday and Vancouver today, followed an increase in the wholesale cost by three-quarters of a cent per loaf.

McGavin-Toastmaster president Allan McGavin said the increase is a result of rising costs.

Last increase was in December, a one-cent hike.

Five Die As Planes Collide

AVALON, Calif. (UPI)—Two twin-engine navy anti-submarine planes collided in flight today off the north coast of Catalina Island, and the navy said there apparently were no survivors. At least five men were feared killed.

Sask. Labor Board Dismissed

REGINA (CP)—The seven active and three alternate members of the Saskatchewan labor relations board were dismissed today by the Liberal government.

Labor Minister L. P. Coderre said he hoped new appointments to the board for two-year terms would be made by July 10. The members dismissed had been appointed for indefinite periods under the former CCF administration.

B.C. Tennis Players Beaten

MONTREAL (CP)—Two Montrealers, Val Harit and Mike Carpenter, won their opening matches against B.C. rivals today in the first round of trials to fill two empty berths on Canada's Davis Cup team.

Harit dropped Bob Puddicombe 6-4, 6-4 and Carpenter easily disposed of Reider Getz 6-2, 6-2.

In other first-round play, Terry O'Donnell, London, Ont., edged Don MacCormack of Victoria 4-6, 6-3, 6-1.

U.S. Doubles Net Stars Beaten

LONDON (Reuters)—Americans Chuck McKinley and Dennis Ralston, top-seeded to win the men's doubles at the All-England lawn tennis championships at Wimbledon, were upset today by an unseeded New Zealand pair.

The Americans seemed assured of a win after taking the first two sets, but faded badly to lose the last three sets to Lou Garrard and Ian Crookenden. The New Zealanders won 4-6, 2-6, 7-5, 6-3, 7-5.

U.S. Gives More
Atomic Secrets
To NATO Nations

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Johnson notified Congress today that he has approved a new agreement to extend the types of atomic information the United States may give to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and its member nations.

Pearson Puts
Flag Debate
Before RecessBy VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Pearson is insisting that the flag debate be completed and the new flag adopted for Canada before parliament gets its summer recess.

The prime minister has made one concession. He has agreed to the flag debate being interrupted after this week so that the Commons can get on with other important business, it was learned today.

These items include: Students loans, family allowance extensions, federal-provincial tax sharing arrangements, the 12-mile fishing limit, the Defence Act and interim supply.

After these essential items are approved the prime minister wants the House to return to the flag debate and finish it before the members leave for their home ridings in August. But the Conservatives are obviously going to balk at approving the flag before a summer recess.

SHOWDOWN DUE

The bitter showdown will come after mid-July. The Conservatives will demand to know if the government intends on approving the new flag before the members get their summer recess. If the answer is "yes" the Conservatives will dig in their heels and start discussing interim supply at length.

A summer-recess without the flag being approved, or no passage of interim supply. That will be the bargaining point for the Tories. What will the government do faced with that impasse?

The fight will come in the heat of July. Meantime, Commons hopes to buy at least 10 days of comparative peace so that it can get the above listed legislation through the House.

The new agreement supercedes an earlier one, under which NATO and its members have been receiving some atomic information for the last several years.

In notifying Congress of the new agreement, Johnson said the expanded area of information is needed to make effective use of nuclear delivery systems being provided by the U.S. under bi-lateral procedures and agreements that followed creation of NATO atomic stockpiles in 1957.

Also, Johnson said, the new agreement will permit NATO member countries to share in information that the U.S. has been exchanging only with NATO itself, under a 1955 agreement.

RULE MORE EFFECTIVE

"This will make these countries' role in alliance planning in the nuclear field more effective," Johnson said.

He said the new agreement "represents a logical and useful step in our continuing and varied efforts to ensure wider allied participation into NATO nuclear defences."

Furthermore, Johnson said, "such wider participation is necessary on both military and political grounds. It is needed to enhance the effectiveness of NATO defences. On political grounds, it is needed to reinforce NATO cohesion in meeting our allies' legitimate desire to make a constructive contribution to nuclear defence."

Under the Atomic Energy Act, the joint House of Representatives-Senate atomic energy committee must have 3 days' notice before the agreement can go into effect.

Defence Secretary Robert S. McNamara and Glenn T. Seaborg, chairman of the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission, had recommended that the president approve the broadening agreement.

In a memorandum to Johnson, they stressed that the new agreement makes clear that there will be no transfer of atomic weapons or atomic weapons systems involving restricted data.

Experts said this provision would rule out any information or equipment that would help make any NATO member an independent nuclear power.

Typhoon Hits Philippines,
16 Killed

MANILA (UPI) — Typhoon Winnie smashed across the heavily-populated northern Philippines with 118-mile-an-hour winds today, causing at least 16 deaths and millions of dollars in property damage.

Reports coming in from affected areas were sketchy because communications lines were down in most places, and Manila itself was badly mauled and without electricity long after the storm had passed.

The weather station at the U.S. Clark air force base 60 miles north of Manila said the typhoon was heading for the Red China mainland.

Assistant presidential secretary Raul Gonzales said in a radio interview tonight that 3,000 families were affected in nearby Pasay City. He said a family of five perished there when their flimsy house collapsed.

Other casualties included two persons crushed to death in Manila when building walls fell on them at the height of the storm. Among other casualties were six persons who drowned in southern Palawan province when their boat capsized.

SLEEPING CHILDREN DIE

Pilotless Jet Roars
Into Home, 2 Killed

HAVERHILL, Mass. (UPI) — A pilotless jet fighter plane crashed with the explosive fury of a bomb early today into three homes and a dozen parked cars in a residential area of this industrial city. Two sleeping children were killed.

The pilot, with an agonizing prayer that the area below was uninhabited, ejected himself from the F8 single-seater craft and parachuted to safety. He landed in a tree top.

The plane dropped silently and swiftly in the darkness shortly after midnight and crashed with a thunderous roar on Lackney Street. The street was transferred into a sea of flames.

The plane ricocheted off one house, veered crazily down the street bouncing off parked cars and another house, and plunged nose first into the bedroom of a third house where the children were asleep with their pet dog.

"The kids never had a chance," a policeman said.

Dead are Pamela Gifford, 11, and her brother Todd, 8, children of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Gifford. The dog also was killed.

The parents were hysterical. They were taken to a hospital for treatment.

The pilot, Capt. Dalbert F. Sullivan of Boston's Back Bay section, said the engine went dead on him after a small explosion.

Before ejecting himself, he said he turned the plane to "a black area," hoping no houses were below.

Sullivan, father of five children, apparently thought he would not survive. He said, "I prayed that my five children would get a good father. I prayed the area was uninhabited."

After landing in the tree, Sullivan climbed down and made his way to the swift-flowing Merrimack River. He inflated his portable raft and floated out on the river until he was rescued.

Joseph Bitonti, who was watching a late show on television, said he heard "an enormous noise, like an atomic bomb, and I saw a mass of flames."

"I saw Earl Gifford (father of the dead children) wandering around in a complete daze. I shouted, 'Watch out for the live wires and flames.' He just groaned."

Matthew Cummings, who lives next door to the Giffords, said his house shook as if struck by lightning.

Residents grabbed garden hoses and sprayed them on the burning houses and cars. It took firemen more than one hour to put out the fires.

The dead were not immediately identified.

Helicopters ferried the survivors to this coastal fishing town about 70 miles west of New Orleans.

The rig sank in 180 feet of water, about 15 minutes after the explosion and wind-whipped flames blanketed the vessel.

Some of the first survivors to arrive at Lakeside hospital here were unconscious. Others were able to walk away from the rescue helicopters.

At least 42 men were aboard the twin-belled rig, which was operating 78 miles southwest of Morgan City.

The 260-foot long rig—actually a drilling ship—is owned by Reading and Bates—of Morgan City. It had moved to the explosion site only Monday.

Half the men on the "C. F. Baker" were asleep when the explosion occurred about 3:30 a.m.

$55 Million
Project O.K.'d

British Columbia's largest—and most costly—copper property is expected to be in production within three years.

Granduc Mines Ltd., a subsidiary of Newmont Mining Corp. of New York announced today it has arranged financing for its $55,000,000 copper project about 35 miles northwest of Stewart at the head of the Portland Canal. The property is in rugged mountainous country at the head of the South Unuk and Leduc Rivers.

The company plans to drive a 10 to 12-mile tunnel under the Leduc Glacier to connect with road systems to transport its copper concentrates from the mine to tidewater near Stewart.

Granduc estimates that the property contains ore reserves of 32,500,000 tons grading about 1.83 per cent copper. A mill handling from 7,000 to 8,000 tons of ore daily will produce concentrates at a rate equivalent to 42,500 tons of copper metal annually.

The concentrates are to be shipped to the refinery of the American Smelting and Refining Co. at Tacoma, Wash. American Smelting has agreed to purchase all production for 10 years and has advanced Granduc $10,000,000.

U.N. Troops
Out of Congo

(Times News Services)

LEOPOLDVILLE—The resignation of Prime Minister Cyrille Adoula's government has been accepted, President Joseph Kasavubu announced today.

The mandate of Adoula's cabinet officially expired today, the fourth anniversary of the Congo's independence.

But Kasavubu asked the government to stay in office until a new constitution, now before the country in a two-week referendum, has been approved, as it is expected to be.

There was widespread expectation that the new government would be headed by Moise Tshombe, the secessionist president of Katanga province whose defiance of Adoula's government was ended by the UN Congo force early in 1963.

Tshombe returned from self-imposed exile in Europe last week and embarked on a reconciliation mission to bring together the still turbulent African country's feuding politicians.

The announcement of Adoula's resignation coincided with the departure of the last UN troops—Canadians and Nigerians—ending the United Nations military operation in the Congo.

An RCAF transport took off with 58 members of a Canadian Army signal unit. A few minutes later a chartered DC-6 left with 85 men of the Nigerian Army's 1st Battalion.

Last man aboard was the UN's last commander, Maj.-Gen. J. Aguly-Tromsi of Nigeria, ending the UN military operation that began only two months after independence from Belgium June 30, 1960, brought anarchy and chaos to the Congo.

The Canadian Signallers were handed poinsettia blooms as they mounted the ramp for the first leg of their long flight to Trenton, Ont. The first stop was Pisa, Italy.

MONEY LACKING

The UN ended its military role in the former Belgian colony today for lack of money. There were no parades or ceremonies to mark the departure of the UN troops.

Those on hand included the civilian chief of the UN Congo operation, Bibiano Osori of Mexico, some 50 members of the diplomatic corps, and friends.

The gradual UN withdrawal started about three months ago. About 50 Pakistani soldiers running an ordnance depot here will stay as part of the UN's civilian operation.

With the military pullout complete, only 400 Nigerian police remain in the Congo—all in Leopoldville and mostly for training purposes—to help Congo.

The brother of the late U.S. president John F. Kennedy came here by car from Warsaw and received another warm welcome from several thousand Poles.

COUNCIL BRIEFS

Flower Sale Plan Starts to Droop

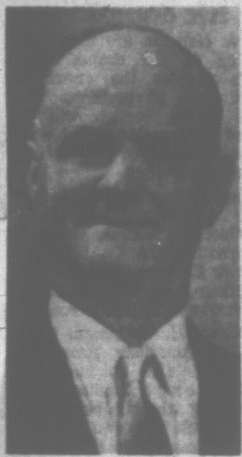

Victoria council, which asked the South Vancouver Island Florists and Growers Association to operate a cut-flower stall on the Causeway, showed a mixed reaction Monday to the association's counter-proposal.

The group suggested a tastefully designed stall, costing about $400, should be set up on the southwest corner of Yates and Douglas instead and it should be provided by the city.

The proposal was sent to committee for study after Mayor R. B. Wilson pointed out the idea sprang from council as a tourist attraction and it might be worth considering that the city own the stall so it could control its operation.

However, both Ald. Geoffrey Edgelow and Ald. M. H. Mooney said they had serious misgivings about allowing a retail operation on city streets. Ald. Edgelow added he felt the association should buy some property and establish its own stall.

"After all, we just turned down the little Italian ice cream man on these grounds when he proposed something similar which would have delighted the little kiddies as much as this stall would delight the adults," pointed out Ald. Edgelow.

WEDMAN funeral Thursday

Homesteader Of Leduc Dies Here

A homesteader from the Leduc area in Alberta died here Saturday after a lengthy illness.

William Wedman of 600 Moss Street was one of 23 children born to Gottlieb Wedman, who emigrated to the Leduc area from Russia in 1892.

Mr. Wedman, born in 1894, homesteaded in the area and continued to farm there until 1958 when he retired to Victoria.

He had always been an active Lutheran and funeral services will be held at Grace Lutheran Church Thursday at 3:30 p.m. Rev. William A. Williams will officiate and burial will follow at Hatley Memorial Gardens. Hayward's Funeral Co. Ltd. is in charge of funeral arrangements.

Mr. Wedman is survived by the widow, Elsie, 13 children and 14 grandchildren.

Children are Mrs. Oscar (Helen) Witt and Mrs. Wilbert (Martha) Behm of Wisconsin; Mrs. Jack (Mildred) Crapelle, Ottawa; Martin, Harold and Mrs. Peter (Rose) Evanchenko of Leduc; Mrs. Sam (Eleanor) Boelke, Edmonton; Mrs. Jim (Florence) Evans, Oakland, Calif.; Mrs. Paul (Theresa) Medley, San Bernardino, Calif.; Mrs. Hans (Doris) Intscher, Grande Prairie, Alta.; and Douglas, Carolyn and Linda of Victoria.

ATKINS ROAD

New School Awaits Principal

Philip A. Lindgren, 30, is a principal without a school.

Just-named principal of an unnamed, un-built elementary school in District 62, Mr. Lindgren was vice-principal of Langford Elementary School. He will stay there until his new school is built, probably next winter.

The new school is planned as part of a three-year school construction-expansion referendum to be put to ratepayers in Sooke school district in October.

It will be located at Atkins and Goldstream, which has been cleared in readiness.

OVERFLOW

Tentatively called the Atkins Road School, the new project will have three rooms and take overflow shift classes from Langford Elementary.

Mr. Lindgren will be principal of these classes from the time they are organized this fall in Langford school, although that school's regular principal will remain in overall charge of the school.

It is hoped by school trustees that because of the nearness of the new site to E and N Railway tracks a pedestrian overpass may be built.

Mayor Wilson told council that the existing "no stopping" signs in tow-away zones are being completely redesigned so they are more noticeable and provide adequate warning for local motorists and visitors.

He added that "no tourist has been towed away for at least two weeks," in commenting on a letter criticizing the city for removing tourist cars that blocked rush hour traffic lanes.

Aldermen endorsed a brief by the Marine Workers' and Boilermakers' Industrial Union urging the federal government to take steps aimed at creating a Canadian merchant marine.

An Island Tug and Barge application to sub-lease some industrial reserve holdings in Lime Bay to a firm planning to establish a saw mill was welcomed but sent to committee for study.

Council agreed that although the mill could not build any beehive burner under a new bylaw, the project should be checked to make sure it would not violate the smoke regulation bylaw.

Mayor Wilson was authorized to represent council at a Friday meeting in Vancouver where Greater Victoria and Greater Vancouver municipalities hope to establish a common position on the current B.C. Hydro transit crisis. It involves both expiry of the franchises and a request for higher fares.

Final reading was given to a bylaw authorizing expropriation of an 80-foot strip extending Finlayson from Douglas to Burnside if voluntary agreement is not reached.

Ald. M. H. Mooney was given permission, after he withdrew from council chamber, to sub-lease a 21-year lease he holds on Skinner for a $250,000 apartment project involving 35 two-storey dwellings designed as Swiss-type chalets.

Previous plans to lease the property to an auto wrecking firm brought a storm of protest and a petition by 600 residents in Victoria West.

Aldermen wound up the meeting with an annual joke—declaring a summer recess for July and August.

Ostensibly, this means there will be no regular twice-monthly meetings during this period.

But in the past few years "special" meetings called during the recess have occurred at a higher rate than two a month and this year, what with the transit situation, capital budget and semi-metro negotiations, they probably will be even more frequent.

Strike Hits British TV

LONDON (AP)—Three thousand television employees decided to strike at midnight tonight against Britain's commercial TV network. The network said it hopes to carry news bulletins and perhaps old movies.

The producers, directors, floor managers and engineers want more money.

The two networks run by the state-sponsored BBC are not affected.

Playhouse Pays Off Before It's Finished

MacPherson Playhouse is paying theatrical dividends even before its renovation is completed.

The nation's leading road company plans to extend its annual one-night stand here to three days this year on the strength of the playhouse's promise, it was learned today.

After looking over the development "I decided that Victoria is well on its way to becoming one of the most important theatre cities in North America," T. B. Hendry, administrator of the Canadian Players Foundation has written various persons here.

Instant Diabetes Test

TORONTO (CP)—The International Diabetes Federation announced here Sunday that a new "instant" blood testing process for the detection of diabetes has been developed.

The federation said in a statement preliminary reports on the process indicate it is so "reliable and simple" that national diabetes detection programs now become a possibility.

The statement said a report on a diabetes survey in Britain has led medical men to believe that the world's diabetic population may be about 200,000,000, more than three times higher than present estimates.

One of the conclusions emerging from the British survey was that urine tests in mass surveying are unreliable and the only way of detecting "hidden" diabetes is by blood tests to determine the sugar content in the system.

The new process, to be known by the trade name of Dextrosix, was developed by the A. E. Ames Company of Elkhart, Ind., the statement said. It has been undergoing rigid clinical tests in Canada and the United States for the last six months. The test requires only one minute to administer.

Rezoning Sought For James Bay Shopping Centre

Rezoning for eight lots at Simcoe and Croft to provide space for building a local area shopping centre was requested today by Mace Homes and Investments Ltd.

The application at City Hall said a new Safeway store, a bank, restaurant and several small shops would be grouped around a shopping mall on property combined with the present site of a Safeway store.

Mace Investments also is building a 12-storey high-rise apartment block across the street.
